Breaking-up of Services Is Sharp Answer to Church's Criticism.

Ban on Document Defied in Prussia

Tension High as Police Confiscate Declaration Hitting Regime.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 10.—Arrests, interference with church services and steps to ban the synod opposing the progovernment church regime formed a sharp Nazi answer today to the confessional synod's scorching indictment of the Nazi religious attitude.

Secret police in Pommerania issued a proclamation forbidding the reading of the document from pulpits.

A few minutes before services scheduled this morning groups of plainclothesmen visited churches and confiscated copies of the declaration. They arrested the pastor of the large Stettin Church of the Cross. He was released after two hours in custody. After police visits the congregations went home.

Similar police actions were taken in other Pommeranian communities, from which came reports of great tension and antagonism to the interference.

Action Scheduled.

Throughout Silesia Nazi officials started proceedings against confessional Synods. It was reliably reported authorities planned to ban the opposition synod in all parts of German Silesia and started such action tonight.

The Rev. Martin Niemoeller, leader of the fight against the unification program of Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller, said "all must know there is a bitter propaganda campaign against the church underway. We must fight against this and for active, not passive Christianity. Jews are not the only ones who crucified Christ."

With intense solemnity the document attacking the Nazi religious policy was read from the pulpits of Prussia to packed congregations. It was the most outspoken organized attack since Der Fuehrer's rise to power. It denounced national Socialism's philosophy as anti-Christian, idolatrous and subversive.

Crowd Overflows Church.

In reverential silence congregations listened to the attack upon the government. No interference from the authorities was reported, but opposition circles believed their bold manifesto could not be long ignored.

The Rev. Mr. Niemoeller's church in suburban Dahlem has been the focal point of the controversy among German worshipers. In this church the crowd was so great that a large overflow heard services and the reading of the document in a nearby parish house.

Reports were made of religious troubles in several provincial centers. In Duesseldorf police banned for an indefinite period the Catholic organ "Young Front," for unannounced reasons.

A Catholic priest named Leffer was arrested in Rostock for "slandering" Adolf Hitler.

Bishop Eduard O'Rourke, of Danzig, in a pastoral letter, warned against "false prophets dressed in Catholic and other clerical garb" and assailed the flood of pamphlets, books and reading matter of a liberalistic nature aimed, he said, at abandonment of the Bible and the Vatican.

The "Evangelical Church Congregation" at Hamburg was banned under the statute for the protection of the state and the people because "its pastor had changed from the Jewish to the Christian religion and exerted baneful influence among his flock."

Ill at Winter Home

Cold Confines Rockefeller Sr. To His Home

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Ormond Beach, Fla., March 10.—John D. Rockefeller, sr., 95-year-old master of oil millions, has been so ill with a cold for the last two days that his local doctor has visited him twice daily.

The nonagenarian's condition had improved to such an extent today, however, that he was considered out of all danger. He might possibly resume tomorrow his daily automobile ride, his sole break through the absolute curtain of isolation and secrecy that surrounds him.

The elder Rockefeller, who spends his winters at the Casements, a rambling, unpretentious home on the shore of the Halifax, developed hoarseness, a slight fever and cold two days ago. Because of his extreme age any illness immediately was considered serious. But the fever had disappeared today. The hoarseness was gone and his condition was close to normal.

Needs Absolute Quiet.

This was Rockefeller's first indisposition of any kind since last July at Lakewood, N. J., when he was desperately ill, apparently with complications caused by a fall. His left wrist and arm were bandaged and had to be carried in a sling, but news of the injury was kept secret. Over a year ago his annual Southern visit was delayed by a heavy cold at his estate at Pocantico Hills, N. Y.

Persons close to the Rockefellers here said that these illnesses over slightly more than a year, and nothing more, were responsible for the complete isolation in which the ancient oil tycoon is living out his life, seeking to reach at least 100 years. Doctors have told the family that absolute quiet, with not even friends allowed to visit him, was the only medicine science has for the man who in his lifetime has turned over $500,000,000 to charity.

Rockefeller, they insist, is brighter, more alert, in better health than he had been for years up to the time of the present indisposition.

Loyal Greeks Take 1,400 And 5 Guns

Hand to Hand Combat Marks Major Push on Seres.

Government Triumphs at Drama, Troops March West.

By the United Press.

Athens, (Monday), March 11.—Loyal Greek troops pressed during the night to within a mile and a half of the heavily fortified rebel stronghold of Seres, and took many prisoners in hand-to-hand combat.

Rebels were reported as still resisting in the villages of Anahoma and Belita, the only remaining points holding up the government's occupation of Seres.

Five rebel guns were captured, and 200 revolutionists, including many officers, were taken to swell the 1,200 previously captured in the last 48 hours of battle.

Gen. George Condylis reported to Athens that the rebels' resistance appeared broken, and that the government's infantry and artillery was continuing to push on.

Rebels in Desperate Stand.

Meanwhile, Gen. Chialistras, coordinating his drive with that of Gen. Condylis, reported victory around the City of Drama, and said he was marching westward, to join forces with Condylis.

The rebels were making an apparently desperate stand on the left bank of the River Struma, and their lines extended to the sea.

Many of the arrested Venizelists were said to have been shot summarily upon capture. It was reported, unofficially, that the garrison at Yanina, in western Greece, has joined the rebellious movement.

The major rebel divisions were bottled up by an encircling movement that drove them from the strong entrenchments once used in the Bulgar-Greek war and forced them to retreat to fortified positions to the west, northwest and southwest of Seres.

Here, strong batteries of revolutionary artillery were hidden on the crest of hills and mountain tops, awaiting an almost certain assault in force today, when a decisive engagement was awaited by the Athens government.

Warships Bombed.

Ten squadrons of heavy bombers poured bombs in the zones near the beleaguered city.

Meanwhile, a loyal air force was keeping a steady rain of explosives over the waters of Kavalla Harbor, forcing the rebel warships which took refuge there to maneuver constantly, and preventing the approach of rebels who had expected to use the fleet for escape if their cause was lost.

A sensation was created by the arrest of Christos Stephanous, described as a "Greek-American," said to be the son of a wealthy tobacco merchant, who was charged with being the main financier of the revolution.

Stephanous was charged, according to the newspaper Acropolis, with assisting Venizelos by providing war supplies. An automobile belonging to his wife, Helen, was confiscated on the grounds that it had been used to transport rebel officers to the arsenal before the seizure of the warships at the outbreak of the revolution.

Yesterday's battle on the Seres front opened with artillery fire along the entire line, launched at dawn. Quickly the infantry swept east of the Struma, occupying in succession the towns of Demirissar, Genikioi and Dimiteeltsion.

Crete Again Bombarded.

While these operations were in progress, a fleet of bombing planes swept the skies around Crete, once more bombing the island barracks and the battered rebel cruiser Averoff, which, according to the government, is almost out of commission.

So rapid was the early advance around Seres that government commanders telegraphed their belief to Athens that they would be able to take the town today and

Death Finally Hears Briton's Swan Song

By the Associated Press.

Hillersdon, Devon, England, March 10.—Death ended the sufferings today of the 84-year-old explorer and big game hunter, W. J. A. Grant, who a year ago—having bought his coffin and instructed mourners what to wear—entertained at a "swan dance" to celebrate the end he expected momentarily.

Almost daily since then Grant had prayed that he might die. He had asked doctors in vain to put him painlessly to sleep. He suffered from heart disease and ailments of age.

Cape Grant in Franz Josef Land is reputed to be named for Grant.

He invited 500 friends throughout England to his champagne supper and all-night party in January, 1934, to celebrate his expected death, and they all came, including a bevy of beautiful dancing girls. But after two hours of sleep, Grant arose to say he felt fine. Elinor Glyn, the novelist, was among those at the party.

2 More Killed As Cuba Riots; Strike Grows

Bodies Thrown in Streets Near Residence of U. S. Ambassador.

By the Associated Press.

Havana, March 10.—Bombs began exploding again in the streets of Havana this afternoon and the bullet-riddled bodies of a radical student and a relative were flung into a fashionable residence street in a repetition of last night's wild outbreak which left four dead and eight wounded in the Cuban capital.

The island appeared to be dangerously close to a general revolutionary strike as union after union answered the central committee's call for a general walk-out before or at midnight tonight.

The last and most important union to join the strikers was that of railroad workers on the main lines between Havana and Santiago, who quit this afternoon.

The bombers started their work early. There was a terrific explosion at 4:40 p. m. A block from the office of the Associated Press and another five minutes later. Both bombs exploded in a cafe without injuring anybody.

City Terror Stricken.

The bodies of Armando Fieto and his father-in-law, Miguel Rogue Fraga, were found lying in a street in the Miramar section not far from the home of United States Ambassador Jefferson Caffery. Fieto was a member of the student's strike committee.

At 5 o'clock another bomb exploded, after which shooting broke out in midtown Havana.

Last night's outbreak was the wildest since the November, 1933, revolution and residents remained terror-stricken all day. Gay Iavana became gray Havana under the state of siege which prohibited the regular Sunday carnival, parades and similar festivities.

An occasional tram or bus could be seen during the day, but they were few and far between. Shocked by last night's experiences, the populace did not welcome the approach of nightfall.

The government was moving swiftly in its efforts to block the strike movement. Citizens were

Dawes, Labor And Industry Hail Upturn

Ex-Vice President Sees End of Depression in Two Months.

Steel Trade and Rails Show Gains; Pay Rolls Are Increasing.

Details of earnings reports of major industries—Page 13.

America yesterday took stock of the situation and decided that business was on the upswing.

From many sources came indications that the pendulum was swinging upward and that the big bad wolf of depression would be routed before summer sets in.

The American Federation of Labor said such was the prospect. This viewpoint was seconded enthusiastically by the United States Chamber of Commerce, Charles G. Dawes, former Vice President and former head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation—the Government's big lending agency—and was backed up by reflection of increased earnings of business firms.

In an optimistic statement, the federation reported that "under the ruffled surface of the business stream currents of revival are steadily gaining."

Steady Rise Since December.

The Chamber of Commerce, in its review, declared "the rise in industrial production, which became evident in December and accelerated in January, would now seem to have continued in February."

Dawes, from Tucson, Ariz., predicted that the depression will be over in another two months and the country will realize it not later than July.

Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. reported a profit and a 39 per cent boost in sales compared to a loss of $8,636,841 in 1933.

United States Steel revealed that steel prices were up and that during 1934 its deficit before dividends were paid was only $14,633,343 compared to $36,501,122 in 1933.

Bethlehem Steel in its annual report showed a net income of more than $500,000, the first since 1931, against a deficit of $8,735,723 in 1933.

Railroad Profits Up.

The Southern Pacific Co. showed an income for 1934 equal to 11 cents per share, compared to a net loss of $4,990,931 the previous year.

Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., revealed that for the first time in five years "the steady and somewhat alarming increase in uncollected taxes of major cities throughout the United States was definitely halted in 1934."

American Smelting & Refining Co. and subsidiaries report net income of $7,583,202 after all charges, taxes and interest, equal to earnings of $1.63 on common stock.

The Maytag Co. reported net profits of $1,960,836 and increased dividends.

Employment Increasing.

Added to this was the report of the Department of Commerce that industrial production in the first two months of 1935 was the highest for this period in five years. This report, too, said that gains in employment and pay rolls in January were 19 per cent larger than a year ago.

Both the American Federation of Labor and the Chamber of Commerce tempered their statements with uncertainty concerning future action of Congress.

Dawes, in an interview with the

Treasury Will Retire $675,000,000 in Bonds By Use of Gold Profit

U. S. Also Will Abolish Issuance of Currency by National Banks.

$13,500,000 a Year In Interest Saved

2% Consols and Panama Canal Loan Issue to Be Redeemed.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Plans for retiring $675,000,000 of 2 per cent consols and Panama Canal loan bonds with a part of the so-called gold profit and at the same time abolishing national bank currency were announced yesterday by Acting Secretary of the Treasury Thomas Jefferson Coolidge.

This Treasury operation is one of the most interesting undertaken in a long time. It has many ramifications, some with an inflationary tinge, but others serving as an immediate off-set. In many quarters this move was regarded over the week-end as a stroke of clever financing without injuring any interest in the country, unless it be the national banks.

The results of the operation, which will be carried out in midsummer, include reduction of the public debt by $675,000,000 without a corresponding increase in member-bank reserves; an annual saving to the Treasury of $13,500,000 in interest payments; simplification of the currency system; expansion of the base for future Federal Reserve note issues and completion of the sterilization of all the gold profit, thus making impossible for at least the present the use of this gold in paying current expenses.

Banks to Lose Privilege.

The national banks will lose the privilege they have enjoyed since their creation after the Civil War of issuing currency secured by a deposit of certain Government bonds with the Treasury. In days past this privilege has been profitable to the national banks, but in the present era of plentiful and cheap money it has not been particularly lucrative.

Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, leader of the Senate inflation bloc, hailed the Treasury's announcement with enthusiasm. He said "it is along the lines of what we have been clamoring for," pointing out that for the first time the debt will be reduced by the issuance of noninterest-bearing notes. He also contended that the operation would increase the currency in circulation by $48,000,000.

The silver-haired Oklahoman lauded the plan particularly as a step toward one type of currency and the concentration in the hands of a Government agency of the power to issue money.

Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, father of the Federal Reserve System and spokesman for the orthodox money school, declined to comment until he had an opportunity to study the program. Throughout his career, however, Senator Glass, along with most monetary economists, has vigorously opposed a bond-secured currency and that feature of the plan should appeal to him.

Date for Redemption.

The Treasury today will call for the redemption on July 1 of $599,724,050 of 2 per cent consols outstanding and on August 1 of $74,901,500 of 2 per cent Panama Canal loan bonds. The latter were issued in 1906 to defray the cost of digging the Panama Canal.

The Consols—the term is a contraction of "consolidated annuities"—were issued in 1900 to consolidate or refund three prior bond issues bearing higher interest rates maturing in the early 1900s, including part of the debt incurred in prosecution of the Spanish War.

These bonds bore the "circulation privilege," which means that they could be deposited by national banks to secure their note issues. About $480,000,000 of the Consols and $40,606,080 of the Panamas are now the security for national bank

SEC Hails 'Flow of Capital' In Utility's $45,000,000 Issue

Calls Pacific and Swift Operations a Revival of Confidence.

Further evidence that the log jam in the capital issues market is breaking up came yesterday when the Securities and Exchange Commission announced registration of a $45,000,000 refunding bond issue by the Pacific Gas & Electric Co.

This was the largest security issue to be registered under the 1933 securities act, exceeding the $43,000,000 refunding issue registered by Swift & Co. Thursday. Both issues were registered on the simplified form promulgated in January.

The registration for the Pacific Gas & Electric issue was filed at 11:30 p. m. Friday night after an exciting dash in airplanes from Los Angeles by Robert M. Gerdes, fourth vice president of the utility.

The company wished the issue registered on March 8, so that selling could be started a few days prior to April 1, the date on which the call must go out for the bonds to be redeemed. The law requires that registration take place 20 days before any bonds are sold.

Although both the Swift and the Pacific Gas & Electric issues are refunding operations, they were cited with enthusiasm by James M. Landis, member of the commission, as indicating a break in the frozen capital issues market. He contended that such financing is

Long to Demand Senate Vote Today on Farley Investigation

Receives Unexpected Support as New York County Chairman Urges Republican Members of Congress to Favor Inquiry.

Senator Huey P. Long announced yesterday that he will demand a Senate vote today on his resolution calling for an investigation of Postmaster General Farley. The resolution has been rejected by the Senate Postoffice Committee.

Long obtained some unexpected support in his drive against the Democratic generalissimo when Republican members of Congress received from Chase Mellen, jr., New York County Republican chairman, letters asking them to vote for the Farley investigation.

Mellen declared that if Farley has nothing to hide there "is no point in his efforts to cause the investigation to be sidetracked."

Meanwhile, leaders of both parties are taking stock of the political consequences of the Long warfare. They see in Long, especially if he continues to have the support of Father Charles E. Coughlin, a factor in the 1936 political campaign.

Long already has done sufficient jockeying to set up palpitation in the hearts of politicians in Louisiana and elsewhere. In Louisiana he has announced that he will be a candidate for Governor next year. In Washington he has announced that he will be a candidate for the Senate. Generally, he has indicated that he expects to be a candidate for President.

Republicans, particularly, are watching with interest his apparent efforts to make himself a factor in the presidential campaign. They feel that he might take sufficient support from the Democrats with his "share-the-wealth" campaign to give the Republicans a chance.

In informed circles, however, these explanations are being given to Long's numerous announcements:

His announcement that he will be a candidate for Governor is designed to dampen the ambitions of anyone who may seek to run against his personal Louisiana Governor, O. K. Allen. If they believe the "Kingfish" will be a candidate, other aspirants are expected to retire in disorder.

His announcement that he will be a candidate for the Senate is looked upon as most likely of fulfillment.

His announcement of his candidacy for President is looked upon as a part of a campaign pointing to 1940, rather than to 1936. It has been stated that Long has no intention of running for the presidency as a third party candidate. Rather, it is expected he will attempt to corral a sufficient number of delegates in the Democratic convention to give him a nucleus for a real Democratic campaign in 1940.

Borah Beckons U. S. to 'Chaos,' Richberg Says

By Felix Bruner.

Well into its third month, with virtually nothing accomplished, Congress was looking forward today to stormy weather again this week.

Among the things it sees ahead are:

Further activities of a group of "revolters" in the House.

A House vote on the soldier bonus measures.

A House vote on the measure increasing the capital of the Home Owners Loan Corporation.

Huey Long.

Donald R. Richberg, in a statement yesterday, hit back at Senator William E. Borah's criticism of NRA. He declared that Borah's stand that most of NRA should be scrapped was one that "most monopolistic rulers of big business have been urging."

Warns of Monopolies.

"Under this program," Richberg continued, "wage earners, consumers and small business men will be stripped of any real protection against unfair competition.

"Monopolies will flourish, unemployment will increase, farm prices and wages will fall, and relief burdens will rise.

"The Senator and his associates led us into the depression and they could not lead us out. But they know the way back and if given a chance will lead us back to chaos."

Borah immediately replied to the Liberty League And A. B. A. Rap Banking Bill

Administration Measure Is Assailed on All Sides, Seems Doomed.

Leaders of the American Bankers Association joined forces yesterday with the Liberty League in another onslaught against the Administration's "tentative" banking bill. Assailed both by left and right wing groups, the measure now seems doomed to go under in the legislative chaos in this session of Congress.

Echoing much the same viewpoint previously stated by 66 members of the Economists' National Committee on Monetary Policy, the Liberty League, in the latest in its series of pamphlets, attacked the bill on these grounds:

"1. It provides for abdication by the Congress of its constitutional duty to regulate the value of money.

"2. It delegates to the executive branch unrestricted authority to control the volume of currency and credit without so much as declaring a policy.

"3. It makes our monetary and banking structure subject to the whims of political influence.

"4. It strengthens the President's power over the Federal Reserve Board and makes it impossible for that agency or the Federal Reserve banks to be independent.

"5. It shifts to the Federal Reserve Board powers now exercised by the nonpolitical Federal Reserve banks.

"6. It destroys safeguards in present law affecting the use of currency and credit.

"7. It facilitates inflation and offers no adequate means of checking tendencies in this direction.

"8. It opens the door to unsafe banking."

The League objected that the

'Hunger Army' Led in Singing

Oklahoma Demonstrators in Quest of Work Pray All Night.

By the Associated Press.

McAlester, Okla., March 10.—Religious songs, led by a woman, competed with card games to allay the hunger pangs of 250 demonstrators who occupied the Pittsburg County Courthouse here today, demanding food and work.

"We have pleaded and talked and prayed continually all night," said Mrs. Viola Watson, the 55-year-old leader.

After addressing the crowd, complimenting its orderliness, District Judge R. W. Higgins and County Judge William Jones, jr., donated small amounts for the purchase of food.

John Eddleman, Oklahoma relief director, said that food would be denied the demonstrators until they returned to their homes.

Pain Wracks 'Shrinking Man,' Science Unites to Avert Death

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, March 10.—Science will mobilize guinea pigs, rabbits and modern mechanical devices tomorrow in an attempt to halt George Bocklet's self-styled reversion "to the ape type."

Bocklet, 49-year-old commercial artist, suffers a rare disease that has lessened his height by 4 inches, expanded his skull and drawn his chin down toward his chest.

Dr. Frank G. Nolan, physician, said today that arrangements have been completed to bring Bocklet from his Azusa, Calif., home, near Pasadena, to a Los Angeles sanitarium where an exhaustive examination will be made of his disease, which, said Dr. Nolan, shows "all the symptoms of osteomalacia deformis."

"Bocklet has shrunk so much," said Dr. Nolan, "that his ribs are virtually resting on his hip bones. His head has become painfully enlarged."

Dr. Nolan proposed to inoculate guinea pigs and rabbits with some of Bocklet's blood to see if he can produce in them the same glandular upheaval that has beset the affable artist. If so, he believes he may be able to find a toxin or antitoxin that would relieve Bocklet.

"The trouble seems to be a marked deficiency of lime," said the physician.

Dr. Nolan explained that while the shrinking of Bocklet may make him feel as if he were becoming more simian, there is nothing in his disease that could be said to be reversing the evolutionary process.

"He is now in great pain," said Dr. Nolan. "He told me that he hates to go to sleep because he feels so much worse when he wakes up."

Dr. Nolan believes that the clue to the trouble may lie in a disturbance of the thyroid and pituitary gland functions. To solve the problem of what it is that afflicts Bocklet, Dr. Nolan will use X-rays, basal metabolism tests, examination of the blood and spinal fluid, and all other medical devices that could be of aid.

Baby Sees Its Mother Killed By Electric Shock in Bathtub

While her 2-year-old daughter played on the bathroom floor, Mrs. Margaret Blair Portier, 35, was fatally shocked yesterday afternoon, presumably as she attempted to plug an electric vibrator machine into a wall socket as she lay in the bathtub in her apartment home at 3621 Newark street northwest.

Mrs. Portier's cries of "Help, Bill, help!" brought to her assistance her brother, William Renn, of Shamokin, Pa., from the living room.

Renn found his sister hanging over the tub, gasping for breath, almost unconscious. Her dripping arm hung down to the floor near which was the vibrator cord, also wet. In a corner stood her daughter, Lucie, who had brought the machine to her mother only a few minutes before.

Renn carried his sister into the bedroom, placed her on the bed and called Dr. E. H. Marquard. Dr. Marquard worked to revive the woman for ten minutes before declaring her dead.

The husband, Pierre Portier, chef at the Washington Hotel, was away at the time. He was summoned and reached home shortly before his wife was carried to the Morgue, where District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald was to complete his investigation.

In addition to her brother, William, who was visiting the Portiers, Mrs. Portier is survived by two other brothers, Walter Renn, of Shamokin, and Eugene Renn, of Harrisburg, Pa., and a sister, Mrs. Betty Poore, also of Shamokin.

Mrs. Portier was employed at the American Red Cross Headquarters as a chapter correspondent. Arrangements for the burial were to be completed upon the arrival of relatives today.

Bird's-Eye View of Business; Unemployment Statistics; Result of Federal Spending.

By Raymond Clapper

ONE of the Government departments is about to inaugurate a new and more timely system of reporting business conditions.

Nation-wide surveys now published regularly by the Government are at least a month old when issued. Machinery being set up will make it possible to catch a bird's-eye view of the state of the Nation's business up to within a day or two of publication. The telegraph will be used and the speedy technique of a newspaper market page will be drawn upon to replace the slow freight methods hitherto prevailing.

These flash pictures of the business situation, however, will be supplemented by the more thorough statistical reports which this and other Government agencies will continue to assemble at regular intervals.

* * * *

Nothing apparently can induce the Government to set up effective and fast machinery for reporting unemployment statistics. These continue to be based on estimates or guesses. Government officials dispute with each other as to the number of unemployed. It ought to be no more difficult to find out how many persons are out of work than for the Department of Agriculture to ascertain the number of pigs farrowed.

Roosevelt's biggest job is to get people back to work, but primary facts which would indicate how big that job is and the progress made from week to week are missing from the bales of figures on every other subject which flow from Government mimeographs.

* * * *

A statistic or two offered by the National Industrial Conference Board on the practical results of the Government spending program:

Monthly net deficit of Federal Government up 60 per cent in 1934 over 1933.

Increase in industrial production, 1934 over 1933, 4 per cent; in employment, 5 per cent.

Average monthly expenditure for relief, 1934 over 1933, up 87 per cent; increase in number of relief cases, 21 per cent.

In those figures lie the real cause of the ebb of confidence in the Administration.

After digging for months into the ways of munition makers, the Senate Munitions Investigating Committee is stumped as to what to recommend. Various members are advocating legislative remedies, mainly for the Government to go into munitions manufacture.

However, in the framing of studied recommendations, the committee is discouraged. Members have found out that in the past it has been impossible to draw a law that somebody couldn't drive a team of horses through. They also feel that leaving broad discretion to Army and Navy officials is equally unsatisfactory because of the close friendly relations found to exist between official personnel and private manufacturers.

Practical difficulties in the way of imposition of Government control over the munitions and shipbuilding industries seem greater the more the problem is studied by the committee and its staff. It would be easy to pull a rabbit out of the hat and propose a law which would be advertised as a remedy for conditions which have been exposed. But there is strong opinion around the committee that it wouldn't mean anything.

Some kind of a report will be filed but as to successfully eradicating evils of the kind which are known to exist, that is a problem on which little progress has been made.

The repeal of the "pink slip" income tax publicity provision which appears to be coming has been the object of a partisan glory-grabbing trick.

On February 8 a Republican, Representative Bacon, of New York, started the movement by introducing a pink slip repeal bill which, except for the routine enacting clause, contained exactly one line of text.

Democrats sat tight and said nothing, but popular sentiment soon began to develop behind the Bacon bill. Thereupon the Democrats decided to take the ball. Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee, introduced a pink slip repeal bill two lines long. He added just enough words to Bacon's text to make the language different without changing the sense in the slightest, as will be seen from the following text of the Bacon bill, with the added verbiage of the Doughton bill included in parentheses:

"Be it enacted, etc., that section 55 (b) of the revenue act of 1934 (relating to filing and making public certain income statements) is repealed."

Senator Gore, of Oklahoma, was going good for a few minutes during the Senate Finance Committee's questioning of Donald R. Richberg about NRA.

Richberg was explaining to the committee how the Administration recovery program had helped the sale of low-priced automobiles.

"Do you regard that as an unmixed blessing?" asked Gore.

"Can a country where 10,000,000 are unemployed afford to buy 4,000,000 cars a year?" Gore asked. "People in Texas in one year expended on automobiles $700,000,000, more than all of the farm produce that was marketed in the State brought. In one county in Mississippi they spent on automobiles $400,000 more in a year than all of their farm products brought. That may be the way out of the depression, but I doubt it."

Then Richberg let him have it.

"You will admit, Senator," he said, "that the consumption of oil has been of some benefit to Texas and Oklahoma."

As Oklahoma's big wealth comes from oil and gasoline that ended the argument.

Hollywood, March 8.

"RUGGLES OF RED GAP." In the lobby after the preview of this flicker, Charles Laughton said to me: "The man who deserves the most credit for the making of this picture is Leo McCarey. I'd like to see him get it." . . . Laughton went on to tell that Director McCarey is more than just a director: He is also a writer. Laughton and McCarey went over the screen play after it was finely prepared. They worked together on this picture much in the same manner that Laughton and Director Korda worked on "Henry the Eighth."

The entire cab sequence was written on the set by Director McCarey. The "He's a Jolly Good Fellow" sequence was supplied by the director, and Laughton's recitation of Lincoln's Gettysburg address was the director's idea.

Laughton claims he wanted McCarey to direct him before he ever met him or knew his name.

* * * *

Several years ago Laughton saw a Laurel and Hardy comedy in London. There was one scene in it that caused him to mutter: "The man who directed that is a wonder." He asked the name of the director and never forgot it. It was while McCarey was directing Mae West in "Belle of the Nineties" that Laughton met him, told him of the London incident, and said he wanted him to direct his next flicker. Now Laughton says he wants him to direct his American pictures whenever it can be arranged.

* * * *

"FOLIES BERGERE." Some words about the French version of this flicker which you'll never see. The Merle Oberon role is played by Princess Natalie Paley, who is as blonde as Miss Oberon is dark. Chevalier would finish making love to Oberon in a scene and then immediately do it again with the Princess. The Ann Sothern role was played in French by Sem Viva, who is a big favorite over there. In the rain number, when the wind is blowing, Miss Viva wore a dress of much lighter material than Miss Sothern did so it could wave more in the breeze and thus please the 50,000,000 Frenchmen who can't be wrong. In fact, the man who supervised the French version insisted on abbreviated costumes for one sequence, shouting: "They will laugh at me in Paris if the girls are dressed too much." . . . In that dancing sequence in the wind, there were 180 holes in the dancing floor, through which at a given signal came a total of 140 pounds of compressed air to make a studio windstorm . . . This number took about two weeks to shoot and cost $170,000.

* * * *

"LIVING ON VELVET." This flicker took 32 days to film and cost about $185,000. The original title was "Tragedy with Music," and it was authored by Jerry Wald and Jules Epstein. The new title was given to it by Supervisor Edward Chodorov, who also contributed some of the dialogue. It was directed by Frank Borzage, who likes to hold a long, thin stick in his hand and tickle the performers.

Kay Francis has a difficult time pronouncing her r's. Therefore the dialogue on the bus, where Miss Francis has to say "Around the ragged rock the rugged rascal ran . . . " was written to kid her. Miss Francis didn't object and took it like a good sport.

* * * *

"ROBERTA." Pandro Berman, producer at Radio Pictures, was searching for a new story for Irene Dunne. While in New York he saw the play and purchased it for $65,000, especially for Miss Dunne. Meanwhile Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers became the biggest drawing cards in musical flickers and the play was ordered rewritten for them. It took two months and four writers to transform the play into a scenario. The main job of the transformation was done by Sam Mintz; the continuity by Jane Murfin; a quick polishing job by Allan Scott who worked on "Gay Divorcee," and then some additional dialogue was written on the set by Glenn Tryon, former actor, who is now assistant to William Seiter, who directed the picture. The picture took a month and a half to film and cost about $900,000.

* * * *

Fred Astaire never played a dramatic scene on a day when he did any dancing. When he dances, his face gets tired and so his straight scenes were photographed when he was fresh and gay. In the "Beauty Parade," the girl in the silver gown is Virginia Reed and the gown was so heavy and tight fitting that she couldn't sit down in it and had to keep standing until they were ready for her to be filmed. The gal who gets the longest close-ups in the parade is Kay Sutton, a friend of the cameraman, Edward Cronjager. She also got a nice diamond ring. The original ending of the flicker gave the final close-up to Irene Dunne and Randy Scott. It was rewritten and given to Astaire and Rogers. The producer insisted on going back to the dance team for box office purposes, despite Miss Dunne's objection.

Driver Is Dead In Ambulance Collision Here

Traffic Fatalities Now 21; Two Persons Killed in Maryland Crashes.

A mounting traffic toll—increased by week-end accidents in and near the city—brought Washington's twenty-first fatality for the year yesterday when Harry Walthrop, 45, ambulance driver for the Board of Public Welfare, died in Emergency Hospital from injuries received in a crash last Wednesday.

Two persons were killed in Maryland accidents and 14 others have been injured since Saturday night.

Walthrop, physicians said, died of a fractured skull, internal injuries and severe burns. He was pinned beneath flaming wreckage of his ambulance following a collision at Twenty-sixth street and Constitution avenue northwest.

Ill Boy Unhurt.

Ten-year-old James Rochester, victim of pneumonia, and his father, C. F. Rochester, of the 300 block of N street northwest, were passengers in the ambulance, but escaped unhurt. The ambulance, en route to Gallinger Hospital with the sick child, overturned and caught fire after the crash. Leslie C. Egleston, 34, of Ballston, Va., driver of the other car, will be summoned before a coroner's jury, police said.

An unidentified white man, among six injured yesterday, was reported near death in Emergency Hospital. He was struck by a hit-and-run driver near Fourth street and Maryland avenue southwest. Apparently hurled several feet and left lying in the street, the man suffered a fractured skull, fractured right arm, fractured left leg and internal injuries. He was described as about 35, wearing brown trousers, black overcoat, brown hat and brown tie.

Motorcycle Policeman Harry L. Tompson, attached to the Traffic Bureau, was hurt when his motorcycle crashed into a taxicab at Third street and Massachusetts avenue northwest. He was treated at Emergency Hospital for lacerations to his left leg and foot. Tompson was chasing a speeder. The taxi driver was not held.

Boy, 15, Arrested.

A second hit-and-run accident sent William Evans, colored, 47, of the 1600 block of First street northwest, to Freedmens Hospital with a fractured hip. He was struck while crossing the street near his home. A 15-year-old boy was later arrested as the driver of the car.

A 5-year-old girl, Margaret Lowe, of 55 New York avenue northwest, was struck by an automobile when she ran into the street from behind a parked car in the first block of N street northwest, police reported. She was treated at Sibley Hospital for head injuries.

George Bontz, 46, of the 900 block of North Carolina avenue southeast, and Richard King, 26, of the 7600 block of Georgia avenue northwest, were treated at Walter Reed Hospital for injuries received in an accident near College Park, Md. Bontz suffered lacerations and bruises and King was treated for possible concussion of the brain.

Girl and Boy Killed.

A girl and a young man were killed in other Maryland accidents Saturday night. Miss Edna Wilford, 19, of Elkridge, Md., was fatally injured in a crash near Hyattsville, Md., and Charles Francis King, 22, R. F. D. 6, River road, Bethesda, Md., was killed in an accident on Wilson boulevard near Conduit road in Montgomery County. Miss Wilford was pronounced dead at Sibley Hospital, and King was dead on arrival at Georgetown Hospital.

A passenger in King's machine, William Johnson, 21, of Potomac, Md., and four occupants of a second car in the accident, Calvin Brockdorff, 22, of Takoma Park, Md.; Gordon Fidler, of Silver Spring; Joseph Holland, of Seeks Corner, and Frank Appleby, were treated for lacerations and bruises.

Brockdorff, said to have been driving the car that crashed into King's automobile, was charged with manslaughter on a warrant sworn out by Private J. D. Briggs, of the Bethesda substation before Justice of the Peace A. L. Wilson. He was released on $500 bond, pending hearing March 22 in Montgomery County Police Court at Rockville.

King, a mechanic employed at Washington Cathedral, was on his way home from a dance in Cabin John, Md., when killed. His parents, Clarence E. and Mrs. Gertrude Royce King, and a brother, John I. King, all of Bethesda, survive. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Four other persons, injured in Saturday night crashes, were reported recovering at various hospital yesterday.

Taxi Driver Salvages Mail Pouch in Street

The keen eye of a taxi driver yesterday saved a pouch of first-class mail destined for the Connecticut avenue station from New York. R. L. Pollen, 923 Eighteenth street northwest, the driver, and Thomas D. Shipley, 2507 K street northwest, his friend, discovered the pouch in the middle of Connecticut avenue near N street in the early morning. Several automobiles had passed over it.

Pollen and Shipley telephoned Post Office Inspector Jester, and he instructed them to deliver it to the main city office opposite Union Station. Officials there suggested it had fallen from a mail truck. It was securely locked when found.

Ten squadrons of bombing planes showered not only bombs but pacifist proclamations on the rebel troops within a 30-mile radius of Seres.

The circulars urged the privates to turn on their officers, desert to the government's cause, and in return receive complete amnesty.

Some observers believed, despite the optimistic government reports, that the fact the rebels made little resistance to the government infantry crossing the Struma indicated they were drawing the "enemy" on, in the hope of engaging in battle in a more propitious location, the heights around the city.

Before noon, the government forces occupied the villages of Provata, Christos, Lefconcas, Mitroussis and Scoutari, and engineers repaired hurriedly broken railway lines, to enable the government to rush artillery, troops and munitions toward Seres for the decisive struggle.

It was reported at Athens that the commander of the rebel troops informed General Condylis, chief of the government forces and minister of war, that if any of the rebel troops were executed after capture, he would shoot any government troops who fell in his possession.

Premier Panayoti Tsaldaris held a conference with the press in which he declared that "the day began with good news and has continued with good news. We have every expectation it will continue the same way."

Acting Minister of War Rodopoulos made the following statement

"According to an air reconnaissance, the rebels are strongly fortified in naturally strong positions around Seres, but our rapid crossing of the river Struma will hasten a decisive battle. We intend to advance to clear east Macedonia and Thrace of rebels with the least possible bloodshed."

It was learned that Eleutherios Venizelos, former premier, who is the titular chief of the rebellion, has warned the government that he will execute Gen. Deedes, commander of the Cretan troops, and Gov. Aposkites, of Crete—both of whom are under arrest—if Maj. Paul Cyparis, who was arrested yesterday, is executed or ill treated.

French and British military observers hurried off to the Seres front last night to watch the operations, upon permission of the Athens government.

Toward dusk the rebels were engaged in a rear guard action at the bridge near Demirrissar.

A late report to Athens was that four government bombing planes had made direct hits on barracks in several Cretan towns, and that the inhabitants were fleeing into the countryside.

Ghevghelli, Greek-Yugoslav frontier, March 10.—Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Troxler, of Richmond, and James McDowell, jr., of Fincastle, Va., are among the Americans in the Greek battle zone where government troops and rebels have been fighting for the last eight days.

McDowell, employed by the Glen Tobacco Co., is at Seres, an objective of the present government drive, and Mr. and Mrs. Troxler are at Kavalla where Mr. Troxler is with the Uhlan Engineering Co.

Boy Burned at Stake Succumbs to Injuries

Brockton, Mass., March 10 (AP). Edward Smith, 9, who was burned at the stake while playing "cowboy and Indian" with a group of boys Saturday, died tonight.

Police said they would take no action against Edward's playmates who tied him to the tree as there was no doubt the mishap was the result of child's play. Edward was bound and a brush fire was started around the tree. It soon set fire to the rope around the boys neck and caused the burns.

Corncob, Leaf Power Propelling Reich Toward Freedom in Fuel

Substitutes Used in Trucks May End Dependence on Foreign Oil.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 10.—Germany is rolling along toward freedom from dependence upon foreign fuel oil—in vehicles propelled by power from coal dust, dried leaves, corncobs, illuminating gas and wood.

Adolph Hitler told German engineers to "build motors which can be driven by domestic fuel or substitutes" and gave government subsidies to get the results he wanted.

Today many trucks using substitutes to run on Germany's wide new highways have made possible a cut of 17 or 18 per cent in foreign oil importations. To help things along the government issued a law slicing by 50 per cent taxes on trucks driven by fuels from substitutes and home produced oil. Community and city administrations will give preference to these trucks in their municipal purchases.

The automobile show in Berlin demonstrated what progress has been made in these efforts to help the Fatherland's trade balance. One of the more popular types is a big truck for cross-country deliveries. It is driven by gas generated from wood. It looks like an ordinary truck, except that it has a large container for wood in the rear. It is said that its cost of operation is about 30 per cent less than that of a gasoline-driven vehicle.

Only a few requirements, like a mixing valve, change an ordinary gasoline motor into one that can be driven by illuminating gas. The Berlin Gas Co. operates several of these cars and says they save 40 per cent. A special service station, which will be the forerunner of a whole chain, can fill gas containers in three or four minutes.

One of the most impressive trucks exhibited at the show was a modern streamlined steam car built by a factory which hitherto has constructed only railway locomotives. The truck is said to be able to develop a speed of 60 miles an hour with 120 passengers.

A stationary motor driven by coal dust is intended for farmers. It was invented in 1916 by Rudolf Pawlikowski, a former collaborator of Rudolf Diesel, inventor of the Diesel engine. It costs 25 cents an hour to operate. It can use as fuel refuse from farms, such as vegetable dust, dried leaves and corncobs.

Quick, Policemen, Summon a Detective

Police Headquarters was engaged with a mystery of its own last night. From beneath the officers' noses the official book of arrests has disappeared.

It wasn't in its accustomed place in the complaint office yesterday. No one seemed to know where it was. Officials were concerned—the book contains names, charges and dispositions in several hundred crime cases.

Known as the "Who's Who" of gangland, the volume is large and bulkly. One could hardly pick it up and walk off unnoticed. But the headquarters station clerk looks sheepishly at the counter where the book should be and wonders just what he'll do if someone gets arrested.

Steel Trade and Railroads Report Gains; Pay Rolls Are Increasing.

Associated Press, said that the panics of 1873 and 1893 had each lasted about 5½ years, as measured by the stock market, and that the present depression would be of about the same length.

Dawes warned, however, that the budget must be balanced and that if Government borrowing continues after recovery it may lead to another smash.

The A. F. of L. statement said that business is now in its third upswing since March, 1933. The view of the labor organization concerning continuance of the upswing, however, was not quite as bright as that of the business group.

Standards Not Raised Is Claim.

"Business will probably continue along a plateau," the statement said, "with steel and automobile production held steady and the expected rise in building somewhat postponed."

The federation statement held that the business upswing had been checked because buying power was not sufficient to sustain it and because of uncertainty concerning the future of NRA.

It added that the standard of living has not been raised during the last two years.

"Instead," it continued, "the average worker who has a job is actually worse off in real income than he was two years ago, and prices are still rising."

The federation sees as two of the most important problems the passage of an amendment to the works bill providing for prevailing wage scales, and assurance that NRA will be continued.

Factories Increase Pay.

Meanwhile, the National Industrial Conference Board made public results of a Nation-wide survey to determine changes in salaries and wages from January, 1933, to November, 1934.

The survey covered 717 manufacturing concerns. It found that of these concerns, 41 per cent had increased executive salaries; 63 per cent have raised nonexecutive salaries, and 88 per cent have advanced wage rates. It found that nearly half the increases in pay rates were made during the second half of 1933, one-third during the first half of 1934 and one-eighth during the second half of 1934.

In the manufacturing industries it was found that increases in executive salaries amounted to 15.6 per cent, in nonexecutive salaries the increase was 16.1 per cent and in wages it was 30 per cent.

Crime—Violent and Non-Violent

Murder, robbery, organized gambling, racketeering, banditry and similar violent crimes properly arouse the general public and officials alike—arouse them to the need of vigilance and the necessity of waging constant warfare for protection against them. Not only is property injured, but human life is also injured and frequently sacrificed by such violations of law.

But let us not forget the non-violent crime. The white collared bandit with his confidence schemes and his investment rackets. Many estimates place the property loss from this type of crime higher than that of the violent classes. Such crimes also jeopardize human life, for many victims have been driven to suicide, and to asylums for the insane by worry over their losses and their gullibility; others have become objects of charity—lives wrecked, incapable of again becoming self-supporting citizens.

We are not willfully trying to paint a dismal picture of despair, but we are trying to warn you to beware of schemers. The one basic easy way to be protected against this type of crime is to be warned before you part with your money. This, the Better Business Bureau does in constant publicity summarized in its repeated advice—

Congress Snag Seen by G.O.P. As Hope of '36

Session's Mistakes Provide Issues for Campaign, Leaders Convinced.

By Robert C. Albright.

It's "haymaking time" on Capitol Hill for congressional Republicans. For the first time since the Roosevelt Administration rode into power they find themselves faced with an abundance of issues and plenty of planks for a platform, 1936 model.

Over the week-end, a number of congressional minority leaders took stock of the situation and decided to hold off a bit longer. Their strategy has been to minimize partisan positions on pending legislation, and give the Administration ample leeway.

"And we are still making plenty of hay," said one prominent Republican Senator last night. "Unless I miss my guess, we will continue to make it up to adjournment time. And as they sow, so shall we reap."

That summarizes G. O. P. 1936 presidental plans, up to the present. Republicans are confident they can take their pick of campaign issues from the policies espoused, adopted, sidetracked or neglected by the Administration during this session. And there will be no heavy planning toward 1936 until the party now in power has a chance to make all of the mistakes that it can make.

Three Issues Seen.

In the opinion of some Republican stalwarts, however, three issues already have definitely crystallized to the point where their embodiment in the next Republican handbook is virtually certain. They are policies the Republicans always have stood for, and could hardly be expected to change.

Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa, a G. O. P. wheelhorse and keynote speaker at the last national Republican convention, enumerates them as follows:

1. Sound money, with an adequate metallic base.

2. Economy in government, as opposed to the liberal spending theories of the present Administration.

3. A protective tariff, and abandonment of reciprocal trading policies where they jeopardize the livelihood of any existing American industry.

Presidential Victory?

The sudden, but not altogether unexpected stalemate in the Administration's congressional program, together with internal strife of the Huey P. Long variety, has given new hope to the House and Senate G. O. P.

Prophecies of substantial gains in both houses in the next election are confidently voiced wherever Republicans gather now, and a few of the more rashly enthusiastic have gone so far as to predict a 1936 presidential victory.

Cleavage within the Republican ranks between liberals and conservatives, that threatened for a time to destroy what nucleus was left of party organization, has been subordinated, although not entirely healed over in recent months.

If party leaders can forestall it, it will not well to the surface again, at least not while Congress continues in session. Even Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, who predicted the Republicans must liberalize or die, has been silent on this score of late.

Unafraid of Third Party.

More persistent champions of the party now believe they can so streamline their 1936 organization as to give both elements ample say, without fatal injury to the unity necessary to every presidential campaign.

In days past, the third party bugaboo has caused them no little worry, so much in fact that they are now callous to it. Since the latest Democratic schism, some of their number feel a third party break will do more damage to their traditional opponents than harm to themselves. There are a few who feel they may actually benefit by it. Such Roosevelt Progressives as Senator Robert La Follette, of Wisconsin, are lost to them anyway, they reason, even if he is still nominally a part of the Senate Republican organization. Senator La Follette still is the heart of all third party talk, and of late, most of the prospective recruits mentioned in connection with the movement have come from the Democratic side.

In a word, old guard Capitol Republicans are satisfied with the progress made toward a 1936 platform. There are floorboards aplenty, they say, in slow moving Administration legislation; to wit, the garroted works and relief bill; the NRA extension measure now under investigation, the new bank bill, long stymied in committee; and the holding company bill, now provoking a Nation-wide storm of conservative protest.

U.S. Will Retire $675,000,000 2% Bond Issue

The Treasury proposes to issue to the Federal Reserve Banks gold certificates about equal to the bonds being retired. For every gold certificate so issued there will be withdrawn from the general fund of the Treasury and held as security an amount of gold equal to the gold certificates so issued.

On the retirement of the Consols and Panamas being held as security for note issue, the gold certificates will be substituted temporarily to secure the national bank currency. But beginning July 1 the Reserve banks will commence the retirement of all national bank notes, paying out for them Federal Reserve notes, which in turn will be secured by the gold certificates supplied by the Treasury.

Until 1932 the Consols and Panamas were the only bonds bearing the "circulation privilege." Thus the amount of national bank notes was limited by the total of those bonds outstanding, although the law permitted a national bank to issue currency to the full amount of its capitalization, which at that time aggregated about $1,600,000,000.

Coolidge Statement.

In an effort to allay agitation for other inflationary measures and as a substitute for the Goldsborough 1926 price level bill, Senator Glass proposes that for a three-year period the "circulation privilege" be given to all Government bonds bearing an interest rate of 3⅜ per cent or less. This provision expires July 22, next, and banks with currency outstanding under this temporary authorization will have to replace the bonds now serving as security with lawful money to retire their outstanding notes.

"The retirement of the 2 per cent Consols and the 2 per cent Panama Canal bonds and the expiration of the temporary authorization for issuance of national bank notes against other bonds," Mr. Coolidge asserted, "will accomplish a simplification of the currency system through the elimination of national bank notes, an action contemplated at the time of the passage of the Federal Reserve Act."

Mr. Coolidge estimated that by July, 1936, virtually all outstanding national bank notes will be retired. He pointed out that the Federal Reserve Bank notes authorized as an emergency currency in March, 1933, now are in process of retirement. Thus there will be left in circulation only Federal Reserve notes. Silver certificates and United States notes.

In some quarters it is believed the national banks will agitate opposition to the Treasury's plan. But due to the fact that the national banks as a whole are not now making any money out of the privilege of issuing notes, it is held there would be less opposition now than at any other time.

Notes Outstanding.

Although under the provisions of Senator Glass' temporary legislation the national banks could have had outstanding as much as $1,500,000,000 in notes at one time, the sum has never exceeded $1,000,000,000. In the last year the national banks have voluntarily retired more than $200,000,000 of their currency, leaving the total on February 1 at $671,167,407.

Nevertheless many of the national banks, particularly the smaller ones, prize the note issue privilege for its advertising value. The name of the issuing bank appears on the note in large letter and the signatures of the bank's president and cashier appear on the face of the note, prestige greatly enjoyed by such officials.

Asked whether he did not think the abolition of national bank notes was a policy which should be determined by Congress, Mr. Coolidge said the Treasury was not encroaching on the legislative prerogative. He pointed out that the question of retiring the Consols and Panamas was one solely within the Treasury's discretion.

The gold certificates which will be issued to retire these bonds will be secured by free gold resulting from the devaluation of the gold dollar in January, 1934. As a result of that action the Treasury realized a gold increment or profit of $2,812,000,000. At the time it was contended that use of this fund would be highly inflationary.

Instead of using it, however, the Administration and Congress immediately sterilized or earmarked $2,000,000,000 of the total as a stabilization fund created for three years. Only $200,000,000 of the stabilization fund has been paid out by the Treasury. The remaining $812,000,000 gold profit was placed in the Treasury's general fund.

In the last year Congress earmarked portions of this gold for various purposes, including industrial loans by the Reserve banks, until now only $642,000,000 remains free for use. This sum will be absorbed completely by the debt retirement scheme. Thus until the stabilization fund is dissolved and returned to the Treasury's general fund there need be no apprehension that the gold profit will be used for inflationary purposes, such as cash payment of the soldier's bonus which has been suggested.

Eventually the $2,000,000,000 allocated to the stabilization fund will be used, probably for debt retirement, but such action is understood to be one for the distant future.

Were the Treasury retiring $675,000,000 of any other indebtedness, other than the Consols and Panamas, out of the gold profit it would be a highly inflationary action. But by retiring the Consols and Panamas in that manner the Treasury is putting into circulation currency of an amount approximately equal to that being retired. Thus there will be no substantial increase in member bank reserves.

Another inflationary aspect of the operation, however, is that the gold certificates which the Treasury is issuing to the Reserve banks can be used as the base for two and one-half times that much currency or approximately $1,687,000,000, which, in turn, could support $16,000,000,000 of credit, if there is a demand for it.

But all that will take place in the distant future, if at all, since the Reserve banks now hold unprecedented excess reserves and without the proposed supply of gold certificates could expand the currency many times its present amount.

Text of the Treasury Statement Announcing Retirement of Bonds

The statement of Acting Secretary of the Treasury Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, announcing the retirement of the 2 per cent Consols and Panama Canal bonds out of the gold profit, was as follows:

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced today that the 2 per cent Consols of 1930 would be called by the Treasury on March 11 for redemption on July 1, 1935, and the 2 per cent Panama Canal loan bonds of 1916-36 and 1918-38 for redemption on August 1, 1935. About $600,000,000 of the Consols and about $75,000,000 of the Panama Canal bonds are now outstanding. These bonds bear the circulation privilege.

In retiring these bonds, the Treasury will make use of the free gold resulting from the reduction in the weight of the gold dollar. The Treasury proposes to issue to the Federal Reserve banks an amount of gold certificates about equal to the bonds being retired. The gold certificates will be issued under the authority of the gold reserve Act of 1934, and for every gold certificate so issued there will be withdrawn from the general fund of the Treasury and held as security an amount of gold equal to the gold certificates so issued.

Circulation Privilege.

By a provision of the Federal Home Loan Bank act, enacted July 22, 1932, all bonds of the United States bearing an interest rate of 3⅜ per cent per annum, or less, were given the circulation privilege for a period of three years. This provision expires July 22, 1935. At that time, banks with circulating notes outstanding under this temporary authorization will have to replace the bonds, now serving as security, with lawful money to retire their outstanding notes thus secured.

The retirement of the 2 per cent Consols and the 2 per cent Panama Canal bonds, and the expiration of the temporary authorization for issuance of national bank notes against other bonds will accomplish a simplification of the currency system through the elimination of national bank notes, an action contemplated at the time of the passage of the Federal Reserve act. More than $500,000,000 of the bonds being called are now on deposit with the Treasurer as security for this type of currency.

The Federal Reserve bank notes authorized as emergency currency in the emergency banking act of 1933 are now in process of retirement. National bank notes will be retired as rapidly as they are presented to the Treasury. It is expected that the great majority will be canceled within a year. This will leave as permanent circulation Federal Reserve notes, silver certificates, and United States notes. Additional Federal Reserve notes will be issued to replace the national bank notes as they are retired, and as demand arises. The gold certificates to be delivered to the Federal Reserve banks will form added reserves against which Federal Reserve notes may be issued.

Gold Increment.

At the time the gold content of the dollar was reduced, a gold increment of $2,812,000,000 was realized. Of this amount, $2,000,000,000 was placed in the Stabilization Fund. Congress has appropriated $139,000,000 for loans to industry through the Federal Reserve banks, some $13,500,000 of which has been used for that purpose. Congress has appropriated an indefinite sum to meet losses in melting gold coins estimated at $8,000,000, and has authorized an appropriation of over $23,000,000 for the Philippine currency fund. This leaves free gold of $642,000,000 which will now be used as a basis for debt retirement.

As the outstanding national bank notes are retired and replaced with Federal Reserve notes, these items will disappear from the public debt statement entirely. The total amount of outstanding currency should not be changed as a result of this program. National bank notes will merely be replaced by Federal Reserve notes. The effect on member bank reserves will be immaterial.

Planes Set to Lift 60 Off Caspian Ice Floe

By the Associated Press.

Guriev, U. S. S. R., March 10.—Airplanes prepared tonight to attempt to remove 60 fishermen from a floating ice field in in the Caspian Sea where they have spent two days.

No trace has been found of 31 others, who were believed to be on a part of the field which became detached from the main body at sea.

A rescue committee called for more planes after an army pilot discovered today that earlier reports the principal group had reached shore were untrue. He located the ice field, about 1 mile square, 50 miles out at sea and dropped the men provisions and medicines.

Seventeen horses were marooned with the fishermen, whose number was 100 when the field broke from shore and was pushed to sea by a strong wind. Rescuers were hindered by a storm which swept this region.

Tanker Seamen Strike, Oil Shipments Periled

San Pedro, Calif., March 10 (AP).—Ocean shipment of all oil from the rich petroleum fields of the Pacific Coast was threatened today by a strike of tanker seamen.

Harry Christofferson, local secretary of the Sailors Union of the Pacific, said the strike will extend to all unlicensed men on tankers sailing from Pacific Coast ports. The strike began last night when 40 seamen left their posts. The union is asking an increase in sailors' wages from $45 per month, including meals and lodging, to $70.

Utility's Issue Of $45,000,000 Hailed by SEC confidence in the American economic structure.

Particularly pleasing to Mr. Landis was that the second large issue to be registered should come so close on the heels of the Swift bond issue. The utility registration served as a confirmation of the hopes raised by the action of the meat packers.

The Pacific Gas & Electric Co. proposes to issue $45,000,000 of 4 per cent first and refunding mortgage bonds, with a maturity of December 1, 1964. The net proceeds with Treasury funds will be used to retire on June 1 $44,636,000 of 5½ per cent first and refunding mortgage gold bonds maturing December 1, 1952. The company will pay a 5 per cent premium in redeeming these bonds.

The new 4 per cent interest rate is lower than on any of the $219,372,900 of the company's funded debt now outstanding. The Swift bond issue will bear a 3¾ per cent rate. By reducing the interest rate 1½ per cent on $44,636,000 of its indebtedness the Pacific Coast utility will save annually about $675,000.

The new issue will be offered to the public through a banking group of nine firms. Lazard Freres & Co., Brown, Harriman & Co. and Blyth & Co., each will handle $9,000,000 of the bonds; Edward B. Smith & Co. and First Boston Corporation will each handle $4,500,000 and Bonbright & Co., H. M. Byllesby & Co., Dean Witter & Co. and E. H. Rollins & Sons will handle $2,250,000 each.

Rushed Here in Planes.

A call notice of 60 days must be given on the bonds which the utility proposes to retire on June 1. Thus the notice must be given April 1, a Monday. But before issuing the call for these bonds, the utility's officers decided they would like some idea of how the new issue sells. Had they delayed filing the registration until Saturday the sale could not have started until March 29, a Friday, leaving only that day and Saturday, a half-holiday, to indicate the success of the issue before action had to be taken on the call.

The utility's officers Friday morning decided that by registering that day, they could gain an additional selling day before issuing the call notice. So Mr. Gerdes started out in an airplane for Washington with the necessary papers. But the airplane grounded at Sacramento. He chartered a plane but at Cheyenne trouble developed and he had to transfer to a third plane, finally reaching Washington after 11 o'clock at night.

Meanwhile, officers of the company in Los Angeles telephoned the SEC to remain open until midnight. John J. Burns, general counsel of the commission, remained on duty to receive the registration. Officers of the company who were not present in Los Angeles when Mr. Gerdes started out were notified that their signatures were required on the registration papers. They telegraphed powers of attorney to Mr. Gerdes along the way and he signed for them.

Strikers Damage Apartments in N.Y.

$1,000 Loss as Vandals Smash Glass, Slit Rugs.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 10.—Cruising strike sympathizers who entered apartment houses, smashing mirrors and slitting rugs and tapestries created disturbances for the second consecutive day in the building service employes walkout in the Bronx today.

Damage estimated at $1,000 was reported at a cooperative apartment where five men invaded the lobbies and proceeded to smash windows, mirrors and chairs and to rip up tapestries, rugs and upholstery. The five escaped.

A guard said he was threatened by one of the men who kept his hand in a coat pocket and told him "to keep quiet." The vandals first sought to induce employes to go on strike.

Year's Auto Crashes Cost U. S. 1½ Billion

New York, March 10 (AP).—Accidents added 1 cent a mile to each automobile driver's operating costs during 1934, an insurance company survey today showed. Accident costs were put at $1,500,000,000 with total motor vehicle mileage calculated at 146,000,000,000 for the year.

Estimated items in the accident bill included $770,000,000 for wage loss, medical expense and overhead insurance cost and $800,000,000 property damage.

Liberty League And A.B.A. Deal Bank Bill Blow

Administration Measure Is Assailed on All Sides, Seems Doomed.

bill contains provisions which would confer undue and improper power upon the executive branch of the Government.

Save for testimony given by Governor Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board before the House Banking and Currency Committee, no action has been taken so far in Congress to advance the bill.

The A. B. A., through a special committee, made public yesterday, a resolution, urging that no action be taken until after a thorough study of the banking system. It recommended such a study be made through the Brookings Institution. The special A. B. A. committee consists of the president of the A. B. A., Rudolph S. Hecht; the first vice president, Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank; Tom K. Smith, of St. Louis; Winthrop W. Aldrich, of the Chase Bank, New York, and Ronald Ransom, Atlanta banker.

Like the economists' committee, the bankers center their fire on Title II of the pending act. The committee announced, on behalf of the A. B. A., that the rest of the bill was approved in substance. The bankers' committee is to confer with leaders in Congress and Administration officials in seeking changes in Title II.

While conservative forces protest that the bill goes too far in creating a politically dominated central bank, inflationist groups in Congress object that it does not go far enough. Administration officials argue that the measure is in the main a recognition of the existing status, rather than a revolutionary departure.

Whole Theory Assailed.

The Liberty League protests particularly against making permanent what were supposedly emergency provisions suspending former rigid requirements covering the eligibility for discount of paper held by member banks. The whole theory, as expounded by Governor Eccles, of having the emphasis on "soundness" of assets and not upon "liquidity" is opposed by the orthodox schools. Especially is there orthodox objection to using the system as a medium for long-term lending on real estate mortgages, much of the opposition resting on the contention that the banking system is not adapted to this specialized field.

Like the A. B. A., the Liberty League sees no reason for haste in enacting the measure and counsels thorough, careful study.

Senator Glass is chairman of the Senate Banking sub-committee which will hold hearings on the measure, though no time has been set. Senator Glass means to summon an imposing array of authorities to testify. Hence, at best, there will be long delay before the bill emerges from committee, if it comes out at all. And with the increasing legislative snarl, the prospects that the bill will be enacted at this session grow steadily more remote.

Doomed Killer 'Gets Religion,' Is Calm

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 10.—Professing that he had "got religion," Philip Jones, giant Clifton Forge Negro, waited calmly in the death cell at the penitentiary today for electrocution tomorrow for the slaying of two white girls.

Regular prison fare was served Jones on the eve of his death. He will be placed in the electric chair sometime between 7 and 8 a. m.

The Negro was convicted of killing Alice Hill, 11, and her sister, Ellen, 9, whose bodies were found in a ravine near Clifton Forge, last November. The girls had been beaten to death with the stock of a shotgun. Because of feeling at Clifton Forge, the Negro was tried at Fincastle, Botetourt County.

Remember '76, Says Coughlin, Warning Banks

Washington, Jefferson Led Revolts, Too, Avers Priest in Defense.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, March 10.—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin urged members of his National Union for Social Justice today to join in a "declaration of independence" from what he termed the "financial Toryism" of a stage-coach economic system, "an economics of scarcity rather than the economics of plenty."

Coughlin listed 27 indictments against the Federal Reserve banking system, which he said held the power "with printing press and fountain pen * * * to expand or contract credit at will." He likened his indictments to the historic "27 points" of Thomas Jefferson.

He blamed the Federal Reserve system for promoting the growth of large corporations, driving America into the war to "secure the credit o fthe British Empire," extending "worthless" foreign loans, permitting circulation of "fictional" credit money, the invasion of high Government councils, the press and the schools, opposing tax reforms and arraying class against class.

Says "Struggle" Sure.

"It is just as logical," Father Coughlin said, "to expect a Caesar to unshackle the chains from the galley slaves, a George III to bestow political liberty to the explointed colonists," as it would be to expect the bankers to "give up without a struggle the financial domination which they possess.

"It is our business as members of the national union to support good government which * * * shall force these tyrants of plutocracy to surrender to the American people their constitutional right of coining and regulating the value of money."

The speaker did not reply directly to Monday's attack by Gen. Hugh Johnson, former NRA chieftain. He announced that he would do so in a broadcast Monday evening.

Cites Washington, Jefferson.

In general terms, however, Coughlin defended his right, as a priest, to exercise the rights and duties of citizenship.

"I have been accused of being an inciter of revolution," he said. "So were Washington and Jefferson.

"I have been accused of stirring up the masses and consorting with sinners—political and otherwise. So was Jesus Christ.

"If there ever flares the fire of red revolt in this harrassed Nation of ours let the international bankers remember 1776. In that day it was the tyranny of a King George which kindled the flames. History will but repeat itself if the protestations of 80,000,000 'crybabies,' peace-loving citizens, are unheeded."

Long Will Demand Senate Vote Today

New Deal, in spite of, or possibly because of, the fact that Administration leaders for the first time have accepted his challenge and are fighting back openly.

Due to Continue Attack.

Long's mail has been heavier than ever since his recent radio talks and since the most recent battles in the Senate. Neither Democrats nor Republicans are overlooking the fact that many of these letters express support of the "Kingfish."

Much as they dislike Long, many Republican leaders see in his activities a new ray of hope for their party's chances.

"He has permitted, under the NRA, monopolies to fix exorbitant prices to the American people," Borah said. "If he's against monopolies, let him come out and stand for the restoration of the laws against monopolies, trusts and combines."

Among witnesses invited to appear before the Senate Finance Committee in the course of its NRA investigation are Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and Clarence Darrow. The investigation will continue today with Richberg, still on the stand. Richberg is expected to present a list of codes which he believes should be dropped under a plan for regulation only of business engaged in interstate commerce.

Revolters Increase.

Representatives Paul Kvale (Progressive), Minnesota, said yesterday that the House "insurgent" group, of which he had been named chairman, has grown from a membership of 30 to a membership of 40. It is composed of Republicans, Democrats and Progressives.

Another meeting of the group is expected to be held before the end of the week at which time two committees will report, one with recommendations for changes in the House rules and the other with recommendations for legislation.

The group is particularly eager to modify so-called "gag" rules in order that it may bring to a vote legislation in which it is interested. Kvale said that he expected the group's rules committee to indicate the ultimate it desires in amending the rules, but at the same time to bring in a practical program which will be considerably short of the ultimate.

"Just a Credo."

In connection with recommended legislation, Kvale said he expected that the stand of his group would be more in a nature of a "credo, or a pronouncement, or a policy, or whatever you want to call it," rather than recommendation for the passage of specific bills.

Kvale said that he expected membership in the group to go considerably above its present figure.

"This movement gives articulation to a group of men who are working sincerely in the best interest of the country," he said. "I hope it will act in a manner truly friendly to the Administration."

Kvale said that the group realized it did not hold a balance of power in the House and that it probably will not grow to the point where it will do so.

Members of the group are interested in the Frazier-Lemke farm refinancing bill, establishment of a central bank, revision of income tax laws, immediate payment of the bonus, shorter hours for labor and legislation guaranteeing the cost of production to farmers.

The bonus is almost certain to reach a vote in the House by the middle of the week, with the Vinson bill, providing for cash payment, but with no provision for raising the money, reported favorably. The measure, in some form, is almost certain of passage, in spite of Administration opposition.

Chairman Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, of the Senate Finance Committee, declared that Senate consideration of the measure will be expedited. He said it will be referred to his committee as soon as it comes from the House.

Some members of the Senate hope to attach the bonus measure to the works relief bill, and Harrison's assurance was taken as a move to prevent such action.

Democratic House leaders are expected to ask for a rule permitting votes on both the Vinson bonus bill and on the Patman bill. The latter provides for issuance of new currency with which to pay the bonus.

HOLC Bill Near Passage.

A vote is expected in the House today on the measure increasing the capital of the Home Owners Loan Corporation $1,750,000,000. The House also is expected to act on the measure to repeal the income tax "pink slip" publicity measure. Both bills appeared certain of passage.

The Senate battle over the $4,880,000,000 works relief bill again will center around the McCarran amendment providing that prevailing wages must be paid on relief jobs. The amendment was once passed by a margin of one vote. Senate Democrats expressed the belief that they now have enough votes to defeat the amendment.

The bill comes back to the Senate with a committee amendment allocating the money to certain specific classes of projects. When the bill again comes before the Senate, there are expected to be moves to cut the amount and to pay the cost in silver or in new currency.

Oakie's Apology Halts $125,000 Damage Suit

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Calif., March 10.—Harsh words assertedly directed by Jack Oakie, film comedian, against Marty Martyn, dance director, dissolved today into friendliness and as a result a $125,000 suit filed by Martyn against the actor stood dismissed.

"I have no desire to make any unkind remarks about you or anyone else. If I have done so, I hereby tender you my apology for same," wrote Oakie to Martyn.

"I am happy to receive your letter and am therefore satisfied to consider the matter closed," replied Martyn.

Martyn had charged that Oakie, in the presence of various screen figures, called him, among other things, "chiseler," "shakedown artist," and "two-dollar bum."

Grange Seeks Drainage Fund

New Market Body Scores 'Neglect' of Needs by Public Works Unit.

By the Associated Press.

East New Market, Md., March 10. Members of the East New Market Grange have protested to the Board of Commissioners of Dorchester County against the alleged neglect by the Public Works Administration in financially aiding rural rehabilitation and improvement projects, especially as compared to PWA sponsored jobs in cities.

The letter of protest was accompanied by a suggestion that the board should make a list of areas in the county where rural improvements to be aided by PWA funds would be most beneficial to the residents.

Following the protest by the Grange members, citizens of East New Market and Linkwood, nearby, proposed to the commissioners that they launch two projects to be financed by Federal funds.

Improvement in the drainage of the headwaters of the Chicamacamico and Transquaking Rivers in order that the water may drain from adjacent farm lands is one of the proposed projects. The cost, it was estimated, would be about $10,000. Nearly 20,000 acres would be improved by the drainage work, it was said. The removal of brush and logs, digging of ditches and similar work would be provided for many unemployed men, it was pointed out.

Choristers' Clothes Rifled at Service

Hagerstown, Md., March 10.—The First Christian Church was thrown into an uproar at the evening service tonight by two men who were discovered rifling the clothing of the members of the choir. The pair was discovered by one of the deacons, Roy Black, who tackled one only to be knocked down a flight of stairs outside the main auditorium.

One robber fled out the front door, but his companion ran into a furnace room in the rear, where he was trapped by Harry Snavely, financial secretary of the church. Snavely tackled the man but was knocked down into a coal pile and the second man also made his escape.

The minister, the Rev. Funk from Beaver Creek, substituting for the regular minister, stopped his sermon as members of the congregation investigated the cause for the disturbance. The pocketbook of Beatrice Phillips and some money from the purse of Celia Bair, both members of the choir, were missing.

G. O. P. Faction Balked in Plan To Oust Snell

Early Publicity Blamed for Failure to Depose Minority Leader.

By the Associated Press.

The bomb that a group of House Republicans sought to put under the leadership of Representative Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, appeared yesterday to have changed into a dud.

Even the ringleaders of the move, admitting they were "licked," qualified their previous assertions that they wanted to "depose" him.

One member who said he was "dissatisfied" blamed "premature publicity" for the breakdown of an attempt to remove Snell. As soon as the members had read of the movement, he said, privately, Snell's friends—and some not so friendly—visited him in his office or on the floor to assure him of their continued support.

The situation was reviewed at a meeting of the unofficial Republican steering committee, which recommended against calling a party conference now for a discussion of the leadership.

Snells' friends also made a check of the situation, and one of them—Representative Martin, of Massachusetts—said that "you couldn't find half a dozen members in the House who would work against Bert Snell."

It was contended by some members of the G. O. P. steering committee, who preferred to remain anonymous, that there had been few chances to create "issues" for 1936. They added that Republicans who always were voting with the Democrats had caused additional difficulties, and one asked "What can you do with 110 Republicans against 321 Democrats?"

It was said that Snell had a number of plans in mind, but the time was not yet ripe to attempt to execute them.

Representative Maas, of Minnesota, has discussed openly his lack of approval of party policy so far. He said it lacked aggressiveness and originality, and told a reporter "you're on the right track" when asked if the plan still was to circulate a petition to force a conference of Republicans for a discussion of the leadership.

Woodstock Man On Trial for Life

James A. Smith Accused of Slaying Aged Neighbor.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., March 10.—Marking the first murder trial in Shenandoah County in five years, James A. Smith will face the grand jury here tomorrow charged with the slaying of his 70-year-old neighbor, Peter J. Cook, after a dispute over a discarded lard firkin.

Following the incident, Smith is alleged to have started for Woodstock to surrender to police. On the road he was met by Deputy Sheriff Jake Sheetz, who was on his way to the scene of the crime.

Attorneys G. E. Pence and Frank Brumback stated today that a plea of self-defense will be entered in Smith's behalf.

Bar Group in Russia Accused on Admissions

Moscow, March 10 (AP).—The alleged admission of Trotzky and Zinovieff sympathizers into the Bar Association of the Western Province of Brackets, adjoining Moscow, brought dissolution today of the association's executive committee and ten of its members were held for trial.

Soviet officials charged Leon Trotzky, who was already in exile, and Gregory Zinovieff, once a high leader, with a recent plot to overthrow the regime. Zinovieff was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment.

Schenck Sees Florida As New Movie Colony

Newark, N. J., March 10 (AP).—Joseph M. Schenck, president of the United Artists Corporation, today announced that he would ask his associates in the motion picture industry to appoint a committee of engineers and technicians to study the possibilities of Florida as a center for motion picture production.

Schenck, returning by plane from Miami, Fla., said he favored moving the studios out of Hollywood, Calif., if high tax bills are enacted by the California Legislature adversely affecting the industry and its executives.

Owe It All to Mother? Scientists Report 'No'

By the Associated Press.

Boston, March 10.—Nearly all gifted children in this country were active born and of American parentage, and great men don't "owe it all to mother," according to a study of "The Psychology of the Superior Child," recently completed at Boston University Graduate School.

The study was made by Miss Mary Digou, under the direction of Dr. Wayland F. Vaughan and Prof. Judson R. Butler, of the faculty.

Miss Digou said it was for the most part "a figment of the imagination of fiction writers" that most illustrious men ascribed their success to their mothers.

If parents of gifted children were not native born, she said, they were usually English, Scotch, Jewish or German.

Americans to Be Evacuated However, if Menaced by Disorders.

By the Associated Press.

State Department officials here yesterday continued a close watch on Cuban developments, but made it plain there existed no chance of the United States becoming involved.

While there was no official comment forthcoming, it was believed officials were frankly concerned about the continued island disturbances. General opinion here, however, inclined to believe that President Mendieta, with the support of Col. Fulgencio Batista, commander of the army, could control the situation.

Disorganized Coup.

Reports received here from Havana indicated the present trouble is largely disorganized and aimed at terrorism, rather than a concerted antigovernment plot.

No Americans have been reported jeopardized by the trouble, but evidences of violence in the vicinity of the residence of Ambassador Jefferson Caffery were noted here with some concern. Caffery, however, has made no reports of being personally endangered. The strict hands-off policy enunciated last week was pointed to today to emphasize the certainty that the United States would not be drawn into the trouble.

The State Department at that time strongly emphasized there would be no American intervention, direct or indirect, in Cuba's internal policies, but this policy would not prevent the evacuation of Americans in troubled zones, should their lives be endangered.

One U. S. Ship on Scene.

Only one small naval vessel now is in Cuban waters, and no others had been ordered there tonight. There are sufficient vessels nearby, and subject to call, it was explained, to remove all Americans who might be affected if the situation got out of hand.

Diplomatic circles here placed strong confidence in Col. Batista, who is backing the Mendieta government. It was felt that so long as he controls the army, the government will dominate the situation.

warned there would be no halfway measures. President Mendieta issued a statement:

"The government takes its place to defend lives and property and to give security. This government is strong and has the resistance to meet all problems, regardless of their size."

After declaring that the government had not indulged in acts of violence, Mendieta said: "The republic must win because there is nothing more unjust than what is happening in these moments. If the campaign now confronting us was directed only against the government we could meet it with that attitude, but it is being directed against wealth and property, peace and order, and even the Cuban family."

There were no theaters or cinemas and few cafes open in the city. Late this afternoon Col. Fulgencio Batista, head of the army, sent seven of his fighting planes over the center of Havana and staged a mimic warfare presumably to work on the morale of militant-minded revolutionaries.

Now and then a few shots could be heard during the day in various parts of the city, but until late afternoon there were no important outbursts.

Although there was some speculation as to the nature of last night's trouble, there were thoroughly reliable reports that it all started when revolutionaries cut the power lines in three police districts and tried to seize police stations.

Some believed it was merely a "sound out" movement to draw out government forces so the revolters could estimate their own strength. This was the most logical theory, because there was no effort made to press the fight.

Fusillade Opens.

A burst of wild firing in the heart of the city was followed by general, uncontrolled shooting from roofs and streets. It was a sudden and unexplained development in the strike situation which has caused the Mendieta government to call off constitutional guarantees.

Government officials declared suspension of the constitution was total and that President Carlos Mendieta was given full power to dictate any measures he deemed necessary to protect public order. He can name military governors in other provinces, holding the same powers as the one in Havana Province.

A decree was issued prohibiting persons from going to the rooftops, presumably to check the epidemic of sniping.

Incendiaries burned a school of Pinar Del Rio. At Camaguey the mayor was removed by President Mendieta and an army officer named to the post.

Mendieta Won't Hire U. S. Strike Breakers

By the United Press.

Havana, Cuba, March 10.—President Carlos Mendieta—a virtual dictator ruling under a state of siege—trusted today in the "common sense of Cuban labor" to avert revolution.

Pearl (Red) Bergoff, professional strike-breaker of New York, offered 10,000 men immediately to break the strike of students, government employes and radical labor groups intent on overthrowing the Mendieta-Batista regime.

The veteran of Cuba's turbulent politics rejected the tender, declaring that the Cuban workers' "common sense and desire for work would not permit me to accept." He added, however, that if he found it "necessary to use the men, I will advise you."

Arrests during the past two days were estimated at nearly 1,000. Many strikers and agitators subsequently were freed, but opposition leaders in hiding were still sought as hundreds of orders for arrest were issued.

P.-T. A. Battles Proposed Cuts In School Aid

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., March 10.—Protesting proposed reductions in State education funds, delegates representing St. Marys County Parent-Teacher Association will go to Annapolis Tuesday, it was announced here yesterday.

State Senator J. Alan Coad and Delegates Albert J. Lomax and Charles V. Haden, all speakers at a P.-T. A. meeting, have made plans to meet the delegates in Annapolis and accompany them to the Statehouse.

Four suggestions, agreed upon unanimously and calling for a full or partial teachers' pay restoration, student transportation costs paid by State, employment of additional high school teachers, and restoration of a reduction totaling $250,000 from the school budget, all will be pushed.

Senator Coad, in promising aid to the association, said that Gov. Nice could be requested to obtain the $250,000 from the "cushion fund" which has been set aside for emergency situations.

It was brought out that St. Mary County is far behind in its high school facilities and can not cope with additional financial cuts without seriously affecting present educational standards. It was also cited that the high school faculties were understaffed.

The four resolutions, sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Associations of the Margaret Brent, Great Mills, and Hollywood High Schools, and indorsed by all members of the groups will be accompanied by an unlimited representation of the rosters.

This Head Should Be In 'Sigmatic Present'

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 10.—Newspaper headlines have created a new tense, the "sigmatic present," says Dr. Manuel Rosenblum, Buffalo collegiate center language teacher.

"When an editor adds color by writing past happenings in the present tense, like 'officials agree on parks program' or 'court keeps boy from funeral,' he is writing in a new tense unknown before headlines were invented," Dr. Rosenblum explained.

Dr. Rosenblum said the "man in the street" liked the headline style and was using it more and more.

'Jail Me First' Mellon's Reply To Tax Demand

Hearings Will Be Resumed Today on $3,089,000 Evasion Charge.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, March 10.—While the financial world of America anxiously awaits the decision, Andrew W. Mellon, whose hearing on a protest against a $3,089,000 assessment on his 1931 income tax return resumes tomorrow, said tonight "I would rather spend the rest of my days in jail than submit to such tyranny." Mellon will be 80 years old on March 24.

Attorneys believe that from three to five weeks may be needed to complete the hearing, which has been in progress a month.

The controversy between the three-time Republican Secretary of the Treasury and the now Democratic-supervised Bureau of Internal Revenue appears to have simmered down to a question of an "avoidance or evasion" issue.

Several other prominent men were named at the time the Revenue Bureau announced its citation of Mellon, and, his friends aver, the others all have paid the monetary penalty rather than incur the expense and notoriety of a legal protest.

Two cases in which the Union Trust Co. ($300,000,000 central banking structure of the Mellon financial empire) is accused of falsifying its own accounts, are pending before the Tax Appeals Board, and Mellon's counsel assert that from correspondence and other contracts they are determined many of America's wealthy group face similar prosecution if Mellon loses.

A ruling is expected Monday on the relevancy of the Union Trust testimony offered by Government Counsel Robert H. Jackson purporting to show the company extended a hand in tax-evasion schemes.

Mellon, who is protesting the assessment, is expected to be his counsel's last witness—probably not going on the stand for two weeks.

Crown, Scepter and Ball Estimated as Worth $70,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 10.—Where are the jewels of the Romanoffs?

When London jewelers bought 2,000 jeweled pieces from the Soviet recently—diamond-crusted Easter eggs, gold ikons and other glittering relics—it was said that at last the treasures of the czars had all been disposed of.

But the prizes of the collection—the crown itself, the scepter and ball—remain in Soviet hands. They are, as Dr. Armand Hammer, of the Hammer Galleries said today, quite unmarketable. They are too costly.

These jewels, Dr. Hammer said, serve as a ready security for the Soviet. They are worth at least $70,000,000.

A great many of the Romanoff jewels are in the United States. Private collections hold some, smart jewelry shops have others, while some remained cherished possessions of impoverished white Russian emigres.

In 1922, when the Soviet put the jewels on sale, Farberge, court jeweler to the Czar, was summoned from Paris to inventory the collection. Since his death the Soviet government's word must be accepted as final.

The crown, valued at $50,000,000, contains 3,000 carats of diamonds and the world's largest ruby. Designed for Catherine the Great, it is not a "practical" crown, Dr. Hammer said. Only Paul, the mad Czar, could support its weight, the others being content to let two strong men hold it above their heads.

The ball, 6 inches in diameter, is covered with diamonds and sapphires. It, like the scepter, is valued at $10,000,000. The scepter, 59 centimeters of massive gold, is notable in that it contains the Orloff diamond, Count Orloff's birthday present to Catherine the Great, that won him reinstatement.

U. S. Drinking a Lot? No, Say Methodists

By the Associated Press.

The Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, yesterday estimated that as a consumer of alcohol, the United States ranks per capita with Bulgaria, Esthonia, Sweden, Germany and Hungary.

"We consume less alcohol than France, Italy, Spain, Belgium, England, Greece, Czechoslovakia and Austria," it said. "The United States consumption is above that of Denmark, the Netherlands, Norway, Australia, New Zealand, Canada, Finland, Latvia and Lithuania."

The estimates was based, the board said, upon a study by the International Bureau Against Alcoholism at Lausanne, Switzerland.

Sen. Davis Expected To Quit Hospital Soon

Battle Creek, Mich., March 10 (AP). Officials of the Battle Creek Sanitarium said tonight that Senator James Davis, a patient in the institution, would be discharged "almost any day."

They reported his condition to be somewhat serious only because of high blood pressure and kidney complications. The officials denied the Senator had undergone an operation, and said rest alone was necessary to relieve the strain of overwork. Senator Davis said he wanted to go home at the earliest possible date.

Mine Boss Receives Medal for Heroism

William Gilbert Saved Two in Coast Disaster.

By the Associated Press.

A shift boss who fought his way through poisonous gases 3,000 feet beneath the earth to save two miners has been awarded the gold medal of the Joseph A. Holmes Safety Association.

A dynamite explosion occurred last December in the Empire mine, Grass Valley, Calif., and the boss, William Gilbert, brought out two workers who had been overcome. He later collapsed during an attempt to save a third. One of the men died later, but Gilbert and the other recovered.

The association, named for the first director of the Bureau of Mines, also awarded a silver and a bronze medal for outstanding acts of heroism in other mine disasters.

But it recognized as well long years of careful operation by 65 mineral industry plants which had reduced their accident toll to a minimum, and 6 individuals who had worked 50 years or more without sustaining a serious injury.

By the Associated Press.

Dr. Ruhrah underwent an exploratory operation Friday and responded favorably, but yesterday began to sink. He was placed under an oxygen tent until his death.

He was stricken four years ago with infantile paralysis—an infirmity which was one of the major studies of his career. He suffered the attack while on an European tour and was hurried to Baltimore.

He was a member of the old Baltimore Club, the Maryland Club, the Century and Grolier of New York, the Societe Francaise D'Histoire De La Medicine and of the Deutschen Gesellschaft Fur Geschichte Der Medizin und Der Naturwisenschaften. He was an independent Republican politically.

Burial Today Of Mrs. Fowler In Connecticut

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fairfield, Conn., March 10.—Mrs. Mary Washburn Fowler, who was "rescued" from a locked park by Abraham Lincoln when the Civil War President scaled, at midnight, a fence around Lafayette square, will be buried here tomorrow, after memorial services. The 71-year-old woman died at her winter home in Thomasville, Ga., Thursday.

Mrs. Fowler, widow of Amos Fowler, of Guilford, Conn., and long prominent socially was born at Galena, Ill., in 1863, the daughter of Elihu B. Washburne and Adele Gratiot Washburne. Her father was a supporter of Abraham Lincoln and one of his intimate friends. During the Civil War he served as a Representative in Congress and was appointed Secretary of State by President Grant. He resigned from the Cabinet to become Ambassador to France and later, during the Franco-Prussian war, represented German interests there. He was the sole diplomat to remain in Paris during the days of the commune.

A family tradition is that when Mrs. Fowler and her parents were guests at the White House she strayed from the grounds and was found later by President Lincoln and her father, locked in Lafayette Park. Without waiting for the watchman President Lincoln and her father found a ladder, scaled the fence and brought the child back. The legend is that Lincoln was wearing carpet slippers at the time.

Mrs. Fowler, who was married in the Washburne homestead at Livermore, Me., spent her early married life in Colorado, where her husband was a mining engineer. After his death she lived in Washington and traveled extensively. For many years she maintained a summer home at Hyannisport, Mass., and Fairfield, Conn., and spent winters in Georgia.

Active in the Society of Colonial Dames and the Daughters of the American Revolution, she had written on early American history and biography. She is survived by two sons, Elihu Washburne, of Englewood, N. J., and John Eliot, of Cambridge, Mass., and a daughter, Miss Sally Washburne Fowler, of Fairfield, Conn. She had been in poor health 15 years.

Sheldon S. Foltz Dies After Stroke

Newspaper Engineer Was Noted as River Pilot.

Sheldon S. Foltz, chief engineer of the engine room of the Washington Star and for many years prior to that connected with operation of old-time river steamers, died Saturday at George Washington University Hospital.

Mr. Foltz's death was attributed to a paralytic stroke, suffered earlier in the day.

A native of Alexandria, Mr. Foltz would have been 59 years of age on March 30. Following his education in the Alexandria schools, Mr. Foltz became a river boatman serving on many of the old-time steamers and tugs that formerly plied the Potomac River and the bay. Among the former were the Harry Randall, the Lady of the Lake and the Jane Mosely, which plied to Norfolk and among the latter were the Minerva and the Mitchell Davis.

During this period, Mr. Foltz became familiarly known as "Shell" and the name stuck to him until his death. He had been connected with the Star since 1899, and made his home at 3822 Garfield street northwest.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Lydia C. Foltz; a daughter, Kathryn L. Foltz, and two sisters, Mrs. George H. Hayden, of Alexandria, and Mrs. Benjamin Elkins, of Washington.

Mrs. Antoine Saavedra, Yachtswoman, Dead

Cannes, France, March 10 (AP).—Mrs. Antoine Saavedra, yachtswoman, who was the former Gladys Parry, of Philadelphia, died suddenly of meningitis today in Genoa, friends here learned.

Mrs. Saavedra, the wife of the former first secretary of the Cuban legation in London, was champion of the star class yacht 8-meter and 6-meter class. She often raced in a yacht belonging to the King of Denmark.

Mrs. Saavedra left Cannes yesterday for the Italian Royal Yacht Club races at Genoa, became sick and died in a hospital there.

J. N. B. Hewitt's Study of Indian Life Shows 'Arrest' Was Brave's Hope.

The best way for an Indian murderer to escape the penalty of death was to get himself arrested as quickly as possible.

For with his "arrest," the murdering brave was reasonably certain his blood kin would make restitution to the blood kin of the victim and that he would be able to go his way as though nothing had happened.

On the other hand, to attempt escape usually meant ultimate capture and certain death.

That is the essence of findings of J. N. B. Hewett, of the Smithsonian Institution, based on studies of the society of the aboriginal Six Nations of the Iroquois, made public yesterday.

According to Mr. Hewitt, it was "against the law" for a murderer to leave the body of his victim. Leaving made him an outlaw. His procedure was to remain on the spot awaiting the efforts of his blood kin to make restitution.

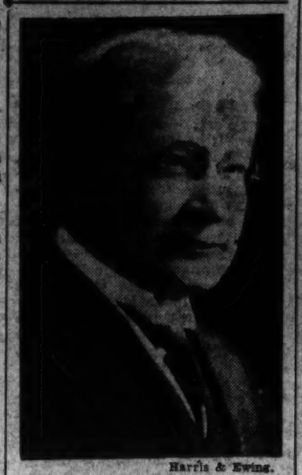
Custom Binding.

It was something more than merely a "law" which bound the murderer not to leave his victim. A custom which had more weight than law, the principle was so intimately bound up with the structure of society that the slayer practically had no choice except to comply with it. Here's the way an Iroquoi murder usually worked, as reconstructed by Mr. Hewitt:

Once a murder was committed, the slayer was fair game for any member of the victim's clan. He hardly could expect to conceal his guilt in a small, closely organized society. If he fled he would be a marked man and certainly would be killed in a short time as an outlaw.

On the other hand, if he remained by the body his chances of life were good. He waited for the arrival of members either of the victim's clan or of his own. Then he would be taken into custody and a wampum settlement probably made by his own kin for the life of the slain brave. Thenceforth, the murderer might go his way in peace. His crime was a closed issue.

While he waited, any member of the victim's family had the right to kill him by any means whatsoever. It must have been a nervous vigil, sometimes continuing for a week or more, beside the unburied body of the slain.



Harris & Ewing.

JOHN N. B. HEWITT.

Vicious Circle.

Actually, however, the chance of this kind of retribution was very small. For the dealer of vengeance himself became a murderer and in turn must wait beside the bodies of the two victims until they were discovered and a settlement made. If he did not, he became a marked man.

When the clans met to decide the fate of a murderer, capital punishment seldom was decreed, because the executioner became in turn a slayer and himself subject to death unless his relatives paid for his life. This would have started an endless chain of killings and the clans were willing to make almost any compromise to prevent this.

Thus the murderer's best chance of escape with his life lay in letting himself be caught. The one alternative was to flee to some other tribe and ask to be adopted.

A killing was "murder" only within the confederation. There was no penalty attached to the slaying of a stranger.

Mine Operators Resume Parley On Pay Today

Strike of 500,000 April 1 May Result Should Negotiations Fail.

By the Associated Press.

The possibility of a strike on April 1 of more than 500,000 coal miners yesterday was in the minds of both operator and employe representatives as they gathered to resume wage negotiations today.

Existing wage contracts with the miners union expire at midnight, March 31. Although John J. Lewis, bulky president of the United Mine Workers of America, has carefully avoided use of the "strike" he has made it plain there will be no work in the mines on April 1 without contracts.

The union leader argues the men would have "no right" in the mines unless an agreement is reached but coal operators assert it will be the union's well recognized policy against working without contracts—not the employers—that will keep the miners idle if the negotiations fall through.

Demands 30-Hour Week.

Resumption of the wage conference finds both sides just where they started February 18. Lewis is demanding a 30-hour week and a $5.50 basic daily wage minimum—an increase of about 10 per cent—as the terms on which the men will work. The operators are flatly opposed to granting them. They want to maintain the status quo for a two-year period.

Complicating the wage question is uncertainty over the Guffey coal bill, which would make the soft-coal industry a public utility, and the problem of what Congress will do about NRA.

With the coal operators divided over the Guffey bill, a Senate Interstate Commerce sub-committee is at work on amendments to the measure which Senator Neely (Democrat), West Virginia, its chairman, hopes to have ready for presentation to the full committee on Wednesday.

Fate of Guffey Bill.

Lewis has said he feels the wage question is inextricably linked with the fate of the Guffey bill, pointing out that there is a possibility that NRA will not be renewed.

Without a code or Federal regulatory legislation, Lewis said the industry will revert to the competition that forced a majority of the operators into receiverships and payment of "decent" wage scales an impossibility.

Officially, today's conference is to draft new contracts for the operators and miners in the Appalachian region, comprising Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Michigan.

Actually, however, it will probably set the scale for the entire industry because the Appalachian region produces more than 70 per cent of the national tonnage and other operators are governed by it.

Third Model House Presented by Post

Dwelling in Chevy Chase Offers Surprise to Visitors.

The third Washington Post model home of the year, which had its initial presentation yesterday, provided a pleasant surprise to the numerous homeseekers who inspected it. The guests found the dwelling equal to advance descriptions.

The new Post exhibit house is located at 3240 Livingston street northwest, in Chevy Chase, D. C. It is presented by its builder, J. Charles Shapiro, Inc., and will be open to visitors daily between 9 a. m. and 9 p. m.

The dwelling is a two-story and attic structure built of dark red and purple brick and surmounted by a slate roof variegated in green and gray. The design is colonial. The lot is 130 feet deep.

The house fronts a wooded area and a paved walk leads to a detached garage in the rear, which conforms to the colonial design of the residence. To see the latest Post model home, drive out Connecticut avenue to Nebraska avenue; follow the latter to Livingston street, then turn left to the house.

Check Hat and Coat! Library Says You Must

The Library of Congress has solved a vexing problem by compelling all users of the reading room to check their hats and coats before entering.

It had reached the point where hundreds of persons were being deprived of the room's facilities because a large percentage of the seats were occupied by coats and hats. On week-ends, many persons were forced to wait outside.

The new rule will be strictly enforced, said Martin A. Roberts, superintendent of the reading room.

THREE MEN AND DIANA

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

Diana Carmichaels lived with her grandmother, who kept a boarding house in a drab part of town. She suffered pangs of poverty, but found happiness for a while when she was offered free tuition at Rutherford, a private school, in return for helping the younger students. Making a brilliant record, the school authorities recommended her for college, but the money was lacking and she took a job in a hardware store. For a while she found happiness in the attentions of wealthy Bruce Palmer, but Bruce's mother arranged for him to go abroad, and the last bit of romance disappeared from Diana's life.

MEN did not pay much attention to girls who worked in hardware stores. Diana had discovered this for herself, as the weeks went by and were months, and she was 18—19—nearly 20.

It was all very well to be helpful and neat and prompt and sweet-tempered and respectable, but it got one nowhere. You could just work on like a mole in the earth, and the other girls had all the fun.

She might have had some fun with these other girls—with girls like Frankie and Emma Mae—if it had not been for those years at Rutherford. In those years she had been the equal—no, the superior—of Joan and Patsy and Con.

She could not forget it. She could not run about with all sorts of men, all sorts of girls, to all sorts of places. It coarsened them; it would coarsen her. She had no inclination toward that sort of thing.

Her Thoughts Were Bitter.

But life certainly was not making fineness and culture easy for her, she would think bitterly, in moods of young rebellion and heartache. To be cut away from her old associates, so poor; to share with Gram a dreary big front parlor for a bedroom, and have to mount a flight of dim, odorous stairs to reach the nearest bathroom; to know that that bathroom was also used by casual lodgers—all this hurt her pride, held her down, discouraged her.

However, there had been some changes at Gram's house. The Coggleses had moved away shortly after Rudy had been killed by a truck in Lincoln street much more than a year ago.

May Rogers's aunt in Connecticut had died and left her nine hundred dollars one midsummer when the Rodgers girls had been renting for their vacation the actual Carmel cottage; they had instantly bought with the windfall.

Sixteen months ago Diana and her grandmother had moved into the empty front parlor where the Coggleses had been hived, mating and bearing and living and dying for several years, and Peter Platt had been installed in their old room, once the mansion's back parlor.

Life Looked Hopeless.

They had scoured and scraped and papered their new quarters and opened the old fireplace, it is true, but Diana's dream of turning the back parlor into a sort of study and making the pantry where her father slept into a bathroom was not destined to come true. No, Gram could not afford that. Peter would pay $4 a week for his room; and Gram had bills to consider. There was not much use in struggling to improve her environment anyway, Diana thought.

Rain and rain and rain. Diana, on a wet afternoon like this, had time to think of matters at home and what she felt were lost youth, lost hopes, lost years.

She looked out of the windows of the Bayhead Hardware Store and saw the rain dancing in wild drops on the empty sidewalks and running like thick milky coffee in the gutters. She had been less than 18 when she had come into this store and she was nearly 20 now. She wondered if she would still be here at 25, at 30.

Len Loved Margaret.

Going to Margaret's little cage with a customer who wanted a check cashed, Diana asked, "How on earth are we going to get home in this rain?"

"Oh," Margaret said, "Len just telephoned. He's got the truck, and he'll come for us."

"Oh, good!" Diana said, delivering package and change carelessly. She did not see the annoyed look the customer gave her as she walked away. Half an hour later she and Margaret scrambled to the high driver's seat beside Len, after a dash through flying drops; the truck skidded and slipped on the wet streets, and presently set her down at her own door. "Len, you are a darling!" she said. But thin, shabby, absorbed Len rarely paid any attention to her. There was but one woman in the world for Len. Sometimes he would say, almost sourly, "Sure, I'm wonderful!" and Margaret would look quickly at Diana, afraid that he might have hurt her feelings. Tonight he said nothing. Diana ran up the peeled and shabby steps of her grandmother's house through the rain and disappeared into the dusky, unlighted bare hallway.

The House Was Chilly.

The usual rainy-day smell of dampness, dust, plaster, boiling vegetables assailed her. Today it must be beets; the strong earthy odor pervaded the house. Diana turned left into the big front parlor bedroom; it was dim, orderly; it breathed an air of emptiness, moisture, the odor of a kerosene stove.

Her wet clothing hung on hangers, her soaked hat stuffed with a crumpled newspaper, Diana yawned wearily as she slipped into a kitchen cotton and ran a comb through her hair. Oh, dear.

She went through the hall, glanced into the pantry where her father's narrow bed stood beneath the empty old shelves, beside the unused sink. Everything was chilly, ugly, shadowy today.

In the kitchen it was better, much better. The big range was fired, because Bluebell, Mrs. Chamberlain's big colored woman from Niggertown, had been washing and cleaning all day long and had left beside the violently boiling beets upon the stove a pot roast smothered in carrots and turnips, and a yellow bowl covered with a napkin, in which salt-rising dough was forming into a smooth mold.

Tragedy for Ella.

Diana's grandmother was busy with the making of a pudding at the table.

"I haven't made my apple, suet and cornmeal pudding for I do not know when, Di."

"Is that what you're at?"

Di sat down and reached for a peeled quarter of apple. She gnawed upon it idly, relaxing in her chair, watching her grandmother like a child.

"How long does it bake?"

"You're hungry, you poor child, you. It doesn't bake but an hour. The meal's all cooked."

"What's happened today?"

Mrs. Chamberlain removed her thoughts from the pudding with a start.

"Well, I don't know why I didn't tell you. Ella Corrigan went to the hospital today."

Diana's fair forehead wrinkled. "Oh, that's too bad!" she said. "Was it bad?"

"No, she seemed real calm. She said she was glad to go."

A New Prospect.

The girl at the table, nibbling her apple, reflected upon the other woman's face. Ella would never return from the hospital; it was the end of the road for her. Pain and drugs and sleep and drowsy farewells now. Ella—gone in the rain—

"Then your front room's empty?"

"No. I declare there does seem to be a Providence in these things," Mrs. Chamberlain said, carrying the pudding dish across the big room to the oven. "I went to the door with Ella and I told her I'd get up somehow to the hospital and see her tomorrow, if the rain stopped. And while I stood there I thought I'd put out my sign, so I took it out of the hatrack drawer and hung it up—'twas raining, so I didn't believe anyone would come in, but it wasn't an hour—Bluebell was working up there—before this lady and gentleman came in — Tressady — that's the name. Hasn't he got it written there—Neal Tressady?"

Son Was an Acter.

"Neal Tressady! It sounds like an actor . . . Hollywood."

"Well, he has been in the pictures, and on the stage, too. They seem to be real well fixed."

"A retired old actor?" Diana mused. "Well, we've had everything else, haven't we?"

"He isn't old, Di. Twenty-six or eight, maybe. He's her son."

"Oh-h-h."

"They considered taking the big room, and then he'd have Louis Hall's old room, right next it. I'd have to do considerable cleaning, and I said I'd paper some."

"And that'd fill the whole house, wouldn't it?"

"I was thinking that. I don't know," Mrs. Chamberlain said, sitting down at the table again with the yellow bowl in her lap, and beginning to tear off spongy bits of dough and mold them into balls. "I don't know how 'tis I'm so fortunate, Mrs. Pawsey is having a real hard time over at the Villa."

Will They Come Back?

"But what of these Tressadys, Gram? Are they coming?"

"They were going over to Mrs. Robbins, but I don't believe she has any room, either. She liked the big room, because it has the big closet with the window in it. She can get her breakfast, and she says she likes a cup of tea about 4 o'clock—she's been in England, it seems."

"Where would she have her meals, Gram?"

"Oh, I forgot to tell you that. She's a sort of partner of Kate Witherspoon, over at the Virginia Tea Shop. That's one reason she likes our neighborhood. He was going to come back this afternoon and let me know if they found anything else, but maybe—" Mrs. Chamberlain glanced at the gray deluge that was pouring down the window panes—"maybe the rain's kept him away," she said.

They've probably found something else!" she said with a sigh.

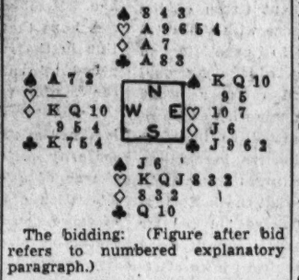
Bye Play.

In playing the defense the expert not only tries to take care of his own end by making the correct play or discard at every possible opportunity, but he tries by his plays and discards to make things as easy as possible for his partner, who may not be in a position to know as much about the hand.

On the hand below the play of West, the declarer, was indeed clever. He permitted North to know just what high cards he held, knowing that it would in all probability cause that player to play into his hands. However, South was alert and he forestalled West's plan to fool his partner by deliberately false-carding. This caused South's partner to get the wrong impression and peculiarly enough thus make the correct lead.

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding: (Figure after bid refers to numbered explanatory paragraph.)

North	East	South	West
1♡	1♠	4♡	5◇ (1)
Pass	Pass	Dbl.	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—A better bid for West would have been four spades. This West player had a complex for playing the hands and really had no way of telling whether his partner had over called with a four-card suit since the overcall was made at the level of one.

The Play.

North opened his Ace of hearts, and declarer ruffed. West took a quick view of the situation. He had to lose the trump Ace and the spade suit in dummy would only give him two discards of his losing clubs. Since the club Ace was almost certain to be in back of him, West realized that he would have to lose two clubs and go down one trick unless he could trap North into playing the suit for him. At Trick 2 West led a low diamond over to dummy's Jack, and then led a low spade in dummy up to his own Ace.

He did this deliberately to let the North player know he had this card. Thus, North, when put in with the trump Ace, might in a panic decide it was essential to shift to clubs immediately, grabbing the setting club tricks before they were discarded on the spade suit. West knew North was not a strong enough player to delve beneath the surface and realize the spade Ace was being shown solely for this reason.

South, however, had not fallen asleep. He knew two club tricks would be needed to fulfill the contract, as he had pretty fair count on the declarer's hand. When at Trick 3, instead of leading another trump from dummy, the declarer led a low spade, obviously up to the Ace, South knew what it was all about and realized the trap being laid for his partner. Accordingly, South false-carded on the low spade led with the Jack.

West won with the Ace and led out a trump; North won and promptly exited with a spade, hoping to give his partner a ruff. When South did not ruff the trick, North was heartbroken, but as the play developed and he found himself winning two club tricks despite the spade discards, North felt a lot better. South's false-card was one of the most brilliant and well-thought-out plays I have seen in a long time.

Simplifying The Currency.

The Treasury has called for redemption the 2 per cent Consols of 1930 and the 2 per cent Panama Canal bond issues of 1916-36 and 1918-38. To redeem these bonds, of which about $675,000,000 are now outstanding, the Treasury will deposit an equal amount of gold certificates with the Federal Reserve banks. These certificates in turn will be secured by gold withdrawn from the Treasury's devaluation fund.

The retirement of the bonds, most of which are held as security against national bank notes, will result in the elimination of this form of currency, since an amendment attached to the Federal Home Loan Bank act of 1932, giving the circulation privilege to all United States bonds bearing an interest rate of 3 3-8 per cent or less, expires next July.

As the Federal Reserve bank notes authorized under the emergency banking act of 1933 are also in process of retirement, it will not be long before the only kinds of money in circulation will be Federal Reserve notes, silver certificates and United States notes. Federal Reserve notes will replace the retired national bank notes, as demands arise, and the gold certificates will add to the reserves against which Federal Reserve notes may be issued.

Retirement of the national bank notes seems desirable under present conditions, although the reasons for urging their elimination when the Federal Reserve act was under consideration no longer appear to be relevant. At that time their withdrawal was regarded as desirable so that this inelastic bond-secured form of note issue might be replaced by an elastic bank note currency which would be responsive to the changing needs of trade and industry. Now that Federal Reserve notes have themselves become an inelastic, irredeemable form of money, the chief argument in favor of retirement of the national bank note issues rests upon the resultant simplification of our present heterogeneous currency system.

Why The Delay?

If there is any good reason for the delay in confirmation of Riley E. Elgen's appointment for another term as a member of the Public Utilities Commission, it has not been explained to the public. The type of service which Mr. Elgen has rendered as chairman of the P. U. C. is well known to the people of Washington and to members of Congress. Apparently the inaction of the Senate District Committee is only a result of neglect.

Utility rates in Washington are among the lowest charged in any American city. In a large measure this favorable situation is a result of vigilance on the part of the P. U. C. Congress has not always manifested appreciation of the work the commission has done. But it has nevertheless continued its efforts to protect the public interest.

When a regulatory body combines such a commendable attitude with efficient work it deserves encouragement. Without further delay Congress ought to confirm Mr. Elgen's appointment. By the same token the Senate ought to give careful attention to the budgetary allowance for the commission. Even the most efficient regulatory body can not continue to render the highest type of service if it is denied funds essential for investigation and research on which to base future rate orders.

Irrelevant Criticism.

Chester C. Davis, Federal Farm Administrator, emphatically denies certain statements reflecting upon the AAA attributed to James Truslow Adams, the historian, in a recently published interview. If Mr. Adams was correctly quoted, Mr. Davis undoubtedly has good reason to protest against the misrepresentation of the character of AAA activities.

Mr. Adams is reported to have said that persons who had never grown cotton, potatoes or tobacco have received checks from the AAA for not producing these commodities. Mr. Davis emphatically denies that cotton benefit checks have been sent to persons who have never grown cotton. He adds that potatoes have never been included in an adjustment program, while the terms of the tobacco adjustment contract specifically provide that payment may be made only to bona fide growers of tobacco.

Of course, some AAA checks may, and probably have, reached individuals not entitled to receive them. It would be most extraordinary if mistakes of this sort had not been made. However, unless the incidents cited are typical and fully substantiated, it seems unfortunate that they should be emphasized as major arguments against the AAA. A critic who writes with the force and persuasiveness of Mr. Adams should be particularly careful to protect himself against charges of exaggeration or misstatement.

There is a wide field for constructive criticism of the AAA. Regardless of whether or not the statements attributed to Mr. Adams can be substantiated, they are irrelevant when the major policies and objectives of the agricultural experiment are under consideration. Whenever any critic yields to the temptation to emphasize relatively unimportant mistakes he must be prepared to face a challenge as to the sincerity of his observations and conclusions of a more serious nature.

The Right To Bargain.

The request of President Green of the A. F. of L. for a conference with the automobile manufacturers to negotiate an agreement independently of the National Automobile Labor Board raises a broad question as to whether a minority group of employes shall be permitted to interfere with the process of collective bargaining. The Automobile Manufacturers Association has replied to Mr. Green that the individual concerns are already engaged "in regular negotiations with the bargaining agencies which their respective employes have elected in accordance with the law and with the President's settlement." A committee appointed by the A. F. of L., it is pointed out, has no authority under the law to select representatives for the employes of the industry.

In this particular case, the rebuff to the overtures of President Green seems to be merited. Employes affiliated with the A. F. of L. constitute a very small minority of all automobile workers and charges of employer conspiracy, coercion and intimidation which have been made the basis for a strike vote are not supported by the existing evidence.

In some industries there is no doubt that employers have brought insidious pressure to bear upon workers to join company unions. Certainly, the average employer does not seem overeager to maintain the representative character of collective bargaining when the A. F. of L. or some outside organization is in control.

But in this case the National Automobile Labor Board appears to have done its work thoroughly and impartially under the chairmanship of Leo Wolman—an economist whose ability and desire to secure a fair deal for labor is attested by his past record. In the elections conducted under the supervision of the board at various automobile plants, precautions have been taken to prevent intimidation of workers either by employers or by representatives of organized labor. The small proportion of voting employes affiliated with any labor organization is a clear indication that the A. F. of L. has no mandate to speak for the mass of workers in the industry.

If the A. F. of L. wishes to become the accredited spokesmen for employes in collective bargaining negotiations, it must earn that right by enlisting the active support of the workers. Such rights can be won only if that organization is willing to adapt its policies to the changed requirements of the mass industries of the present day.

Under section 7(a) of the recovery act, workers are entitled to be represented by individuals of their own choosing in collective bargaining negotiations. This means that employes must be left free to choose whether they will remain independent, join a company union or affiliate themselves with an outside organization. The purpose of the law is plain and in case of the automobile industry its spirit seems to have been observed in undertaking to establish a genuinely representative kind of collective bargaining.

Misdirected Attacks.

Both Senator Borah and Senator Glass are convinced that the NRA is a destroyer of small business and a promoter of monopolies. Senator Borah calls insistently for a return to the antitrust laws, and Senator Glass declares that the NRA has been used to intimidate and boycott small industries.

To those who have witnessed the repeated and often futile efforts of small businesses to organize for purposes of mutual protection along lines authorized by the recovery act, these charges that the NRA discriminates against the "little fellow" are not convincing. The fact is that big business units had in many cases succeeded in effecting organizations designed to curb predatory trade practices years before the recovery act was conceived. Small business units, on the other hand, have always found it extremely difficult to maintain effective working organizations to regulate competition, although they have often been most eager to do so.

Consequently, when the recovery act was passed, the industries best suited to succeed under the code system were as a rule those representing relatively large industrial units, with a successful experience in organization behind them. The NRA did not account for their predominance; it merely brought these actively functioning trade associations to a higher degree of efficiency. The hard work that remained to be done lay in the organization of the small businesses that had in the past failed to curb unfair competition by agreement.

The recovery administration is open to criticism for having attempted to bring innumerable small business units within the scope of the act. But its failure in this field does not indicate that unregulated competition among these small undisciplined groups will eliminate the evils of price cutting and other forms of unfair competition that are responsible for a high rate of business mortality. Senatorial critics are misled when they attribute to the recovery administration the disasters that inevitably overtake thousands of small business units under a system of competitive enterprise based on survival of the fittest.

The Misnamed "Gag" Rule.

It is traditional for minority groups in the House of Representatives to set up a clamor against "gag" rules. When the minority becomes a majority, however, it almost invariably resorts to the so-called "gag" procedure to insure the approval of its legislative program.

The current demand for reform of the House rules comes from a relatively small faction which is trying to promote an impractical conglomeration of bills. Most of the measures in this "program" will not bear scrutiny on their own merits. Action on them can be obtained only through political brush-beating or a campaign of ballyhoo. Members of the new coalition doubtless hope that if they can secure modification in the rules, the House can be stampeded into acceptance of nostrums which the Administration will not approve.

Apparently the antigag rule movement is aimed at that provision which requires a majority petition to bring about the discharge of a committee from further consideration of a bill. There is no element of repression or autocracy in this rule. It merely enables committees to which legislative proposals are assigned to use their own judgment about reporting them back to the House, unless a majority of that entire body signifies a desire for action on a particular measure. Under this arrangement the leaders can not be embarrassed by frequent demands from minority groups, but any measure that commands enough support for passage can be taken immediately to the floor. Applied to this procedure, the term "gag" rule is obviously a gross misnomer.

The real objective of the so-called Mavericks in the House is to foist upon that body acceptance of bills that are opposed by the majority. Their efforts to modify the House rules are only a means to an end. Since the end itself is undesirable and the procedural change sought would make responsible leadership in the House more difficult, the new coalition is not likely to find any popular support for its campaign.

That "truth is stranger than fiction" is an axiom so applicable that it has become bromidic in its usages. The growing number of inexplicable accidents, uncanny coincidences, and almost unbelievable reports of sudden fortune have greatly intensified the burden of the author who seeks to create tales that will compete with, if not excel, the strange happenings recorded in a day's news.

Even the late Conan Doyle, whose hero-detective has thrilled millions of people, would have been hard put to compete with a story which has just been revealed in the recent death of a beggar at the airport of Croydon, near London. This tattered old scarecrow was tolerated and even befriended by the airdrome mechanics because he was elderly, harmless and apparently shared their great love for the planes they tended. He had not a little fame, too, caused by his weird habiliments which consisted of old newspapers pasted or pinned together. "Paper Jack," as he was called, was killed—perhaps murdered—last week by a hit-and-run motorist.

At the inquest, it was learned that the unkempt, shiftless, old fellow was in reality one of Scotland Yard's noted and responsible detectives. Besides being possessed of acute faculties for outwitting criminals, he had in his favor a "camera eye" which prevented his ever forgetting a face once he had seen it. From a well-to-do family, splendidly educated, formerly connected with the War Office, and cooperating surveyor for a part of the Brighton Railway, he nevertheless played his role so well that tourists often threw pennies at him in pity. It is assumed that he adopted the garb of newspapers so that he might get a better look at alighting passengers who lingered to laugh at his appearance. So effective was his work that a criminal gang is suspected of deliberately murdering him by the hit-and-run method.

The story of "Paper Jack" in the newspapers is somewhat short and sketchy. But there is enough of it to provoke the interest of any one who ever followed the maneuvers of Sherlock Holmes with bated breath. Now it remains for a fellow member of Scotland Yard to trace down the hit-and-run motorist. But those familiar with the activities of that famous force will realize that this will be merely a matter of "simplicity itself."

Giving Them The Air.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Anti-Blimp" in The Post of March 6 didn't say half enough about the airship flying over the city. Nobody would object to it if it flew over the city once in a while. But even the President in the White House expressed himself as annoyed by the noise caused by planes continually flying over his home—and what was done about it? They gave orders not to fly over the White House. Well, now, the same thing pains a lot of other people, and it is high time that all these other fellows were ordered to do their flying in the country or over the Chesapeake Bay, where they will be a nuisance to nobody.

Besides, remembering the way these machines suddenly go bad and drop to the earth, what about the danger to the lives of the citizens of Washington, not to mention the members of Congress, our eminent legislators and statesmen?

I for one do heartily second the objection already registered in The Post. Why can't something be done about it? President Roosevelt had this nuisance banned from his section of the city. I feel the same way about my home. CITIZEN.

Washington, March 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Anti-Blimp" is right. Why should we be exposed to the danger of another Akron or Macon disaster? If dirigible-makers want to try out dirigibles, let them fly over the river or out in the country where a collapse will injure nobody but the men actually engaged in the flight, or if they must fly over the city, let them select a different section each day and give the rest of us some rest.

JUST OUT OF THE HOSPITAL.

For Mr. Farley.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post is a sincere, high-planed newspaper—a square shooter, and has, I think, been consistently generous in its attitude toward Postmaster General Farley. Your editorial of March 6 was an honest one. But should not these anti-retentionists, in all fairness, ask themselves two or three plain questions? For instance:

"Is my urging Farley's resignation of one job or the other based on the belief that, close as he is to the President, he would hold to his Cabinet position and drop the national chairmanship?"

"Do I believe he would hurt, use or abuse his Cabinet position for sinister party purposes, even if deaf to the promptings of personal honor, aware as he is of the spectroscopic quality of avowed criticism today?"

It has never occurred to anyone to impugn the President's motives, and but rarely those of his close affiliates.

However, another matter, of far graver concern to us of the South just now, and one also involving a different question of "retention," is to how much greater depths of hoodlumism senatorial exhibitions will be allowed to descend! That is a humiliating question to the entire Nation?

Reform After Meals.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am an old man and have seen our fortunes rise and fall. In all these crises I have never doubted a recovery and do not now. But I do doubt the good sense of this huge spending machine, called the New Deal.

It is my experience that these crises are part of the price we pay for our enormous progress. Stability we might have but only at the price of stagnation. Americans want progress, expansion and development and these can only be achieved through the old system of American capitalism. In the past we very generally let nature take its course when panic was upon us and the course always led us to higher peaks.

My experience impels me to say that we should stop excessive spending; stop harassing business, and stop talking like children. If money, tariff and tax problems were settled and the Government would stop the very extraordinary spending, we would get going in 30 days. If we must have reform for the benefit of book-minded idealists, let us have it after we have eaten. Not as a partisan, but as an American, I veto the New Deal and call for a restoration of common sense, the laws of economics and the multiplication tables.

JOHN F. LATTERN.

Washington, March 7.

Byzantine Blood.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I recently noted in The Post the following: "Prince Eugene Lascaris, so-called pretender, also indicates his right to reign." * * * "claiming descent from Byzantine families, and is in no way related to the line established in the selection by Queen Victoria of Prince William of Denmark" to the throne of Greece in 1863.

It might be of interest to the world to learn that Queen Victoria herself was related to the same family from which Prince Lascaris claims descent. I happen to know this, because, while in Smyrna, I found in a copy of an old English booklet, sold by a dealer in old books, the genealogy of Queen Victoria, carefully traced back to the time of Basil II.

In this connection, it is noteworthy, that Basil himself was an Armenian prince who had been merely visiting Constantinople, but was so liked by the then Greek King that the latter prevailed upon him to remain there. It was recorded in the same pamphlet that the Byzantine King crowned the prince as King, five years before he himself died, fearing that his subjects might not carry out his wishes of having Prince Basil for King.

Thus, seeing that Queen Victoria herself was a descendant of Byzantine families, it was strange that she should have recommended a prince from Denmark, instead of one of the Lascaris family, since this family is the logical claimant to the Greek throne. We hope, however, that Greeks may unite in reestablishing a monarchy once more, and that the prince may receive the crown. PHILIP CALPAKIAN.

Washington, March 8.

Does Money Grow On Trees?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We are regular subscribers to The Post and each one in the family is most interested in some part of the paper. But I read more and more the editorials and the letters.

Your editorial of February 27, "Dodging The Issue," is very appropriate. But why object to the wage amendment? If we agree that the way to prosperity is spending, then let us give the people something to spend. I want to say I am not 60 years old, or on the relief, nor have I anyone to whom the bonus would make one speck of difference to my own income. But for the benefit of all those who would be helped by these bills I would like to ask one question—What is $50 a month but a dole? Could any decent, self-respecting family get anything but food and shelter on such a niggardly amount?

If we are to spend billions, let us do it like a sport and give the fortunate few enough to spend to give some a job helping them spend it. Let us give the soldier his bonus for his starving children. Give the old folks enough to take a trip and enjoy one last spree. And then, if anything is left, give the unemployed enough to buy their wives a washing machine, an electric refrigerator and a house with a bathroom. A READER.

Driving Away The Best Music

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This afternoon while listening on the radio in rapt attention to the Brahms German Requiem which Toscanini was conducting in New York, I was dismayed and even angered when the superb finale was snapped off—and why forsooth? So that I might have an opportunity to listen to Mr. Kindler, who was conducting in Constitution Hall.

This was the poorest kind of publicity for the National Symphony Orchestra. Had I wanted to hear Mr. Kindler instead of Toscanini, I could have gone to Constitution Hall, instead of remaining at home. And if the National Symphony had to be broadcast, could it not have been put on some hook-up which would not have eliminated the incomparable Requiem of Brahms, which can be heard but occasionally in anybody's lifetime?

This unfortunate occurrence is important because it portrays so graphically what the National Orchestra is gradually doing. It is removing from Washington the possibility of hearing any first class symphonic music. For, say what one can for the idea of a local orchestra, it is beyond question that this orchestra is necessarily second-rate and must remain second-rate, no matter how hard the conductor or the musicians work for years to come. In the meantime, it is driving all the old orchestras out of the city. The Philharmonic has gone already. The Boston Symphony has announced that it will not return unless the attendance is at least doubled and the Philadelphia Orchestra has refused to make any decision as yet concerning the next season. The probability is great that no Washingtonian will hear an absolutely first-class symphony concert unless he can travel at least as far as Baltimore when the well-known orchestras visit that city.

Before attempting to raise in as small a city as Washington an annual sum of $100,000, the board of the National Symphony would do well to ponder the possible and even probable results of such a campaign. Even if successful this year, can such a sum be raised another time, much less year after year in a city containing but few people of great wealth?

Is it wise to drive out the few concerts of first class symphony music, which we used to have in order to give the public a great many concerts of inferior quality? Surely one memorable musical experience is worth more than a dozen which are forgotten before the audience leaves the hall.

Let the National Symphony continue by all means, but if its board of governors succeeds in raising the huge sum for which they invite contributions, could not $25,000 be set aside to insure the continuance of the Boston Symphony visits or the return of the Philharmonic with Toscanini?

The other alternative, the preemption of the symphonic field by our own orchestra, is too tragic a situation to contemplate. When the general musical public realizes what has happened, it is sure to wreak its vengeance on the people who have—even if unconsciously—created that situation.

OLD WASHINGTONIAN.

The Post Impressionist

In Re Gilbert Vs. Sullivan.

Post Office, Monday.

WE yield the floor to a former Solicitor General of the United States.

You may—or may not—remember that we recently published our opinion of the Gilbert and Sullivan operettas. Well, it seems that this former Solicitor General (who confesses, "I am a Gilbert and Sullivan fan") gave considerable consideration to our thesis, but had to go to Florida before penning an opinion upon it. Now, returned to Washington, he repairs his omission.

Some of our contentions he approves—and this "is praise indeed," for he is a literary man of literary stock, a connoisseur of music in a family which has produced no non-musical member for seven generations. On other points he differs from us—but whereinsoever he does differ, he advances a proposition well worthy of his intellectual ingenuity.

And he has a theory about the relative merits of the two collaborators which we don't recall having ever seen otherwhere advanced.

So here is James M. Beck speaking:

"Just as 20 lovesick maidens followed Bunthorne, at least 20,000,000 men and women have enjoyed Gilbert and Sullivan for half a century. The continuous popularity or Gilbert and Sullivan is outstanding. Some 200 years ago, manager Rich produced Gay's 'Beggar's Opera.' Except for its indecencies, this was much in the Gilbert vein, and of its great success the wits said that it made Rich gay and Gay rich. It was successfully revived a few years ago, but it has never held the stage for any period equalling the still hardy life of its Victorian successors. If we except grand opera, there are but two classes of attractions which have continuously 'kept the boards' so long: the best of Shakespeare, the best of Gilbert and Sullivan.

"What is the cause of this astounding popularity?

"I am quite in agreement with your theory that one element of appeal in these operettas is their assumption of naivete—a perfect assumption, however studied it may be. The English are the greatest race of sentimentalists in the world, so they try valorously to avoid any outward expression of sentimentalism. But at least one form of it—the love of children and child-life—has produced immortal classics in English literature: 'Midsummer Night's Dream' is the loveliest fantasy of the sort—and there are 'Alice in Wonderland,' 'Peter Pan,' the 'Christmas Carol' and 'Treasure Island.' Exactly so are the works of Gilbert and Sullivan things apart from the workaday world; they are in the fantastic sphere of childhood.

"But to say this is not to explain everything.

"Gay to the contrary notwithstanding, Gilbert's followers to the contrary notwithstanding, too, Gilbert was unique in the libretto form. His satire had a serious effect, if not a serious purpose. It destroyed the so-called Esthetic Movement—you can not have forgotten Bunthorne's ode 'Oh, Hollow, Hollow, Hollow!' It relentlessly exposed the superficiality of Swinburne's jingles:

> Where the dust of an earthy today is the earth of a dusty tomorrow!'

"Only last month, here at Washington in this period of great depression, Gilbert's best humor was able to make a thousand smiles grow where none was before.

"Gilbert has had many imitators, especially in our own country; but the trouble with the American operetta or revue is that its librettist tries too hard to be funny; he forgets what Hamlet calls 'the modesty of nature.' Gilbert, at the height of his powers, knew just where to stop.

"Nevertheless, considering the joint works of Gilbert and Sullivan from the first of them to the last, I think that Gilbert's contribution to their perennial popularity is somewhat overestimated. You will have seen that I do not discount his satirical wit; but it does seem to me that his fun, so fine and full at the start, diminished in both quantity and quality as the operettas grew in number. I find the libretto of Ruddigore stupid, even the humor of Iolanthe rather thin.

"Sullivan, on the other hand, was the greatest English composer since Purcell. Sullivan's musical education had been German, under the influence of the school of Schumann and Schubert. It is a pity that his more serious compositions are rarely produced—that, outside this collaboration, he is best known only for his setting to 'Onward, Christian Soldiers' and 'The Lost Chord.' Be that, however, as it may, his music in these operettas has all the joyous youthfulness of Mendelssohn and of the lovely lyric melodies of Schubert.

"Good music will carry anything: witness the librettos of many masterpieces of grand opera. So Sullivan's music saves Gilbert's lapses. And so my own view is that, in the continuing popularity of Gilbert and Sullivan, the major factor is Sullivan's music."

Britain Is Watching Mussolini 'Work Out'

Italian Occupation Of Abyssinia Is Visualized As Wedge Between England And India.

By Edward Acheson.
Special Correspondent of The Post.

"FOR about 15 centuries the Italians have never won an important battle. Whether their training of the last few years is enough to create a nation of soldiers remains to be seen. If it has done so, no greater triumph has been achieved by a single man, and no more severe test could have been chosen than the conquest of Abyssinia. It is an object which any patriotic European can applaud. Its accomplishment will be of service to the world, and, fortunately the world may be allowed to play the part of spectator. It will be the supreme trial of Mussolini's regime. We can, with clear conscience, fold our hands and await the news on the wireless."

Thus the Evening Standard, the post meridian voice of little England, brushes the dust of Ethiopia from its editorial feet.

Apparently Abyssinia is to be used as a punching bag for the purpose of determining whether Italy is really in the "pink" as she thinks she is. Apparently, also, this section of British opinion regards the threatened hostilities as a "purely private war." The rest of the world can "await the news on the wireless."

Possibly it will, but the folding of hands will have to be accomplished after the fact. At the moment none of the calm, disinterest which the Standard so hopefully prophesies is generally apparent. France, Japan, Germany and Britain, all watch the progress of Mussolini's "workout" with vital interest, if, perhaps, with mixed emotions.

France's stake, which may possibly become financial, is on Italy. Paris traded with Rome; Italian support for France in Europe in return for a carte-blanche to gobble up Abyssinia.

Herr Goebbels' concern is vicarious. To date, his only overt interest has taken the form of shipping some 20,000 selected German books to the Abyssian capitol, for the purpose of demonstrating to the benighted, but as yet free, Ethiopians how much better off they would be if enlightened by Aryan rule. Germany in this instance, seems to be letting Japan do her worrying for her.

And Japan does appear to be deeply concerned for her cottongoods market as well as for the considerable territorial concessions she has received for cotton growing in Abyssinia itself. Furthermore—what may be judged grimly humorous by some of the white races—the Africans, who have had fairly good reason already for hating and fearing the Europeans, have not as yet discovered that there can be and is a corresponding type of yellow imperialism. Only by the most adamant Italian interference was a recent marriage stopped, a marriage between an Abyssinian prince and a Japanese girl of good family."

• • • •

THE attitude of Berlin and Tokyo has certainly influenced the Paris end of the Franco-Soviet alignment. If Abyssinia is going to be "gobbled," Paris much prefers that Italy do the gobbling.

And finally, Great Britain, which officially belongs to neither the German-Japanese, nor the Soviet-French camp—surely, thinks the Standard, she can "play the part of spectator."

But the foreign office doesn't seem to enjoy this sanguine confidence. The ever-present question of India lurks in the background like fate. And, oddly enough, the same element in England, which decries the "surrender of India," sees nothing to concern Great Britain in the "Abyssinian affair." Yet the loss of control over the Suez Canal and the Red Sea, would spell the "surrender of India" in much larger letters than the granting of any form of self-government to India herself, especially since the grant can not be withheld much longer in any case.

The logic which forces England to be interested in Abyssinia is inexorable. To control the canal, it is always taken for granted that England must control Egypt. The existence of Egypt depends and has always depended on the Nile. And the source of the Nile is Lake Tzana, in Abyssinia. That this is not only of geographical importance, can be gathered from the Anglo-Abyssinian treaty of 1902, which was invoked with some show of firmness in 1927, when an American engineering firm contracted to dam the water of the Blue Nile at Lake Tzana in order to control the supply.

But from this point on, the British position becomes an enigma. Italian occupation of Abyssinia would greatly strengthen Italian influence on the Red Sea district. And obviously the next move would be a linking of this new East African Empire with the Italian colonies on the Mediterranean. But such a conception envisages cutting directly across England's Cape-to-Cairo belt, a project on which the British foreign office has, traditionally, been highly sensitive.

On the other hand, England did cede Jubaland to Italy in '24, and only French exposure and opposition at Geneva defeated the "understanding" between Italy and England in the following year, regarding the Ethiopian railroad.

It may be that Great Britain is planning to be on the winning side in any event. Which in this case would seem to be the path of wisdom. For it would be extremely embarrassing to back the wrong horse, and have the right horse decide to kick over the traces by damming the Nile, and diverting its course, which is a perfectly possible engineering feat.

• • • •

AND there is one other possibility of which England is not insensible. It is the very barest of outside chances, but in the present Walpurgis Night of Europe "almost anything is more than likely to happen." It might just turn out that Mussolini defeated Abyssinia and at the same time defeated himself. He assumed power by a coup d'etat and once that sort of thing becomes fashionable there is no logical reason why Roman history should not have a twentieth century counterpart. The military faction, returning to Rome led by a victorious pro-consul—shall we say, Balbo—might be the very exigency which prompted Mussolini's recent demogogic speeches and his recent attempts to win over some of the old Socialist leaders.

Be that as it may, the happy complacency with which a part of the British press is viewing the Abyssinian "incident" is pure ostrichism. Italian supremacy in Ethiopia, whether it be good or bad, is not "an object which any patriotic European can applaud"—at least, not without some qualms and qualifications. And the "supreme trial of Mussolini's regime" is not being awaited "with folded hands." There are far too many fingers in the African pie.

Fruit Growers To Hold School

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., Mar. 10.—A horticultural school will be conducted in the courthouse here Friday, opening at 9 a. m. Fruit growers in Fairfax, Loudoun and Fauquier Counties have cooperated to bring the school to this section.

A program of talks has been prepared as follows: "The Fruit Situation for 1935," by A. H. Teske, horticulturist of V. P. I.; "Rosy Aphis of 1935," by Dr. W. J. Shoene, entomologist, of V. P. I.; "How Many Scabby Apples Will Be Harvested in 1935," by Dr. S. A. Winegard, plant pathologist, of V. P. Merchant Bans Ejection of Birds From Dwellings

By the Associated Press.

Denton, Md., March 10.—Refusing to disturb his feathery tenants from the homes he has built for them, William Willoughby, 89-year-old merchant of Williston, near here, this week disposed of his stock of merchandise but refused all offers for his birdhouses.

A few unfinished birdhouses were included in the sale of the stock, but none of the many he has erected on the lawn of his home and on the property of his store were touched.

The houses, principally for wrens and martins, are of various sizes, ranging from miniature mansions of many compartments to tiny cottages for a limited number of bird families.

Willoughby has always been known as a lover of birds and some of the houses he has built for them in the past have sold for large sums.

Along The Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

Testimonial Dinners.

MARTYR-LIKE, the Administration is carefully hiding one of the good things it intends to do when it gets the $5,000,000,000 from Congress. It might be said, in fact, that its attitude on this one thing is a commentary on the abuse it is taking from the critics of the bill. Day after day these ignoramuses get up and say the Administration does not know what it intends to do with the money, that it simply wants it in the hope something will turn up which will warrant its expenditure.

BARGERON.

But the Administration sits calmly by letting this abuse fall around it, comforted only in the knowledge of its righteousness. The critics will feel right silly when after he gets the $5,000,000,000 Mr. Roosevelt produces his ace card.

• • • •

What is intended is the revival of that old and proven profession of giving testimonial dinners. It has been estimated that at least 5,000 men in this country made their living getting up testimonial dinners before the depression. When the break came this business dwindled with everything else and there is a serious question as to what ever became of the dinner arrangers or getters-up as they were frequently called.

A fear has been expressed they all committed suicide or in other ways passed out of existence because even with the turning of the tide, whether in late 1932, as the Republicans claim or with the advent of Mr. Roosevelt as the Democrats contend, the prospects for the revival of the testimonial dinner business faded still more instead of picking up.

Business turned the corner with the rising tide and so did industry and other pursuits of life but the testimonial dinner industry continued to go on down.

This is realized now to be a result of the Democratic denunciation campaign aimed at those for whom the testimonial dinners used to be given. Not that they attended. In the old testimonial dinner days it was never necessary that the guest of honor be present, or that the diners be present either, for that matter. The business of getting up the dinners was nevertheless a profitable one.

All the getters-up had to do was to write a lot of letters to prominent people saying the friends of Oswald Lewinwald, that grand old man of steel, had decided he should be honored with a dinner. A select company of his friends were being permitted to contribute $10 a plate. No accurate statistics have ever been gathered as to how much was collected this way. But just about the time the collapse came it had come to be one of our major industries.

• • • •

Well, manifestly the testimonial dinner business could not be revived immediately because the Democrats so bitterly denounced the boys around whom the dinners used to be gotten up. J. P. Morgan, Charley Schwab, Charlie Mitchell—there's hardly a one the Democrats missed. You can imagine what a razzing a testimonial dinner getter-up would receive were he to try to get subscriptions for any of these fellows now.

Recently, however, there has been a change of heart on the part of the Administration. The realization has come that while the men who were denounced were among those whose wealth was to be redistributed, the boys who got up the dinner were of the proletariat and seeking to redistribute wealth themselves. The Administration has learned that in hitting the big boys it has dealt a body blow to honest boys who were making an honest living.

So it hopes to remedy this injustice if it gets the $5,000,000,000. It might be said, in fact, that just as part of the first $3,300,000,000 was used in taking care of the unemployed artists, this $5,000,000,000 will be used in restoring the testimonial dinner boys. Before this can be done, of course, there will have to be a campaign to restore in our affections those to whom the dinners can be given. In other words, we've got to get up some good names.

"Are you kids coming outta there or will I have to come in after you?"

No End of Books

With Rifle, Cartridge and Range; Or the Gentle Art of Hitting the Bull.

By Theodore Hall.

I WAS about to remark that today's column is "For Men Only," when I remembered in time that ever since the first Colonial Dame leaned out the blockhouse window to pot a panther with the old flint-lock, women have had their share in the peculiarly American tradition of rifle shooting. If, in the unbelievable finesse of modern shooting matches, they have never quite ousted the men, that is for the only reason that women lag in bisexual competition—they haven't the time to practice. And why, once more, should I start to keep all this on the daily-shaving side of the fence, when we have right here in town one of the two or three most famous women's rifle clubs in the country—the George Washington University rifle team, which for years went up with girlish glee to the national matches at Camp Perry and gave the hardened old military and civilian professional shots a run for their money.

If you're already a long-rifle fan, with a shooting squint in the right eye and a hair-trigger finger, you can ignore the two books on the table today for but one reason, that you've got them both. If you've never known the plaguing and imperious joys of trying to hold the tip of 2 feet of gun-barrel on a wavering, elusive, and impudent bullseye, theen our two authors today are gentlemen to start you off right.

For whether you take an old .22 that your father had as a boy (and a well-born barrel will last a lifetime of ordinary shooting) out in the back wood-lot to knock the tar out of tomato cans, beer bottles, and their ilk, or whether you outfit yourself with a 12-pound handmade Winchester 52, or Hubalek .22 decked out with speed action, micrometer sights, windgauge, and sling, wear a special shooting coat and shooting glasses, and watch the target through a 33-power spotting telescope—furious with yourself if you don't put the shots in a 2-inch circle at 100 yards—you can have an almighty grand time with a rifle.

• • • •

DOWN in the little town of Marines, Onslow County, N. C., there's a firm which does nothing but print books on the sport of gunpowder. You'd do well to get acquainted with the Small-Arms Technical Publishing Co., and with its genial manager, Thomas G. Samsworth. Its list runs from the art of gunsmithing to the methods of shooting a Kadiak bear—an expert on each, all, and sundry writing down the facts to instruct both the tyro and the old hand. The result is one of the finest specialized lists in American publishing.

There's scarcely a thing about high-power rifle shooting that can't be learned best with the small bore. Flinch at trigger-pull, for instance, is not the result of the gun—it's the result of bad shooting habits; lack of a "follow-through" which is precisely like golf.

And you could not ask a sounder teacher of the small-bore than C. S. Landis' rich and meaty volume, ".22 Caliber Rifle Shooting" ($3.75). On the range side, Mr. Landis qualifies by his experience as a statistical officer at the great Seagirt range and as a frequent medalist on the same range; on the sporting side, he has been the rifle expert for Field & Stream, and for 14 years the shooting editor of Rod & Gun in Canada. More, he writes clearly and attractively.

Here you'll find the subject of the .22 rifle from A to Z; from descriptions of the chief makes to the ballistics of the cartridges; from adjusting the sights to determining how the wind blows by the looks of the heat-mirage; from postions to famous shoots, and from women and children at the game to the last finesses of superaccuracy. And that's but half; the rest of the book deals with the rifle on small game—squirrel, woodchuck, crow, hawk and even duck and goose at rest, and wild turkey wherever you can find it.

A thorough and excellent book, indeed, and well illustrated. But Mr. Landis was napping when he included the picture on page 275—a hunter, with rifle in one hand and a squirrel in the other, has his foot on the lower rail of a board fence with barbed-wire at the top, seemingly on his way to climb over it. Even if it's just a resting pose, it's a bad suggestion. There's just one way to get over a fence with a rifle—push the rifle, muzzle away from you, under the fence on the ground, and walk down the line 10 feet and climb over bare-handed. Every other method has been tried once too often.

WHEN you graduate to high-power rifles, Capt. Edward C. Crossman's "Military and Sporting Rifle Shooting" ($4.50) is the book to have. Written with a cheerful colloquiality and packed with more data and figures and sage advice about wielding the larger rifles than any other book, it holds the experience of one of the leading riflemen of the country. The detail and finesse are extraordinarily impressive, eye-opening to anyone who does not know that crack sharpshooters watch the pollen in the air through telescopes to determine the wind-drift, work in their shooting eye by practice sights so that they won't shoot low at first, warm their rifles in a tent with an oil-stove before they begin, and prefer to shoot a match with an uncleaned rifle so that the first shot will have the same conditions as the last. And as for minutes of angle, trajectory drop, spin of the bullet, barrel-whip (optics of sighting), and the psychological factors of trigger-pull, Capt. Crossman offers enough material to round out the knowledge of almost any expert rifleman.

Odd fact, if you're interested in physics: when the makers of .22 ammunition (cited by Capt. Crossman in his chapter on wind) stepped up in 1930 the velocity of the long rifle cartridge from 1,050 feet per second to 1,300 f. s., it was found that more windage allowance had to be made for the higher speed. You'd think, naturally, that the faster bullet would be less bothered by wind. Not so—the wind-drift of a bullet is not proportioned to its time in the air, but to its "delay" (the difference between its actual time in flight and its time if it were fired in a vacuum and had no slowing-down). Faster bullet: greater proportional slowing-down; greater "delay," and hence more windage. And if I haven't made it clear, look up Capt. Crossman.

You may not want to take a match-barrel Springfield out on the range, smoke your sights and adjust them to half-a-hundredth of an inch, watch puffs of mirage, time your breathing to five seconds a trigger pull, and try to put a shot in the 20-inch inner bull at 1,000 yards. That's the super Ph. D. of shooting. But in every degree of enjoying a rifle—kindergarten, grade school, high school, A. B. and A. M.—you'll find these books will keep you on the right track of an ancient and honorable sport.

One Summer

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

SOME time since I repeated a story I had seen many years ago in a periodical, where a little boy, in response to a question from a gentleman, "How old are you?" replied, "Well, if you go by what mama says, I'm 5; but if you go by the fun I've had, I'm most a hundred."

• • • •

The distinguished music critic, Charles Pike Sawyer, of Brooklyn, writes me

" • • • I wondered if by any chance you had in the years gone read a story called 'One Summer,' which was published anonymously, and, some years after, acknowledged to be her work, by Blanche Willis Howard. It is a small book, but full of rare treats in the doings of Gem, a small boy who always dated his birthday from the Fourth of July, who said, "If you count by years, I'm only 15, but if you count by the fun I've had I'm a hundred.' If you haven't read it try and get it from a library and read it. You'll enjoy every word of it. I am not sure of the date of publication, but it was about 50 years ago. It has always appealed to me and to some one else who never returned my copy, for I am much of the same mind. 'If you count by years I'm only 80, but if you count by the fun I've had I'm a million.'"

• • • •

Now I well remember the sudden popularity of that book "One Summer," which appeared exactly 60 years ago. The author was Blanche Willis Howard (1847-1898), of Maine. After the publication of this novel in 1875, which the people described in that locality did not like, she went abroad for study, married the court physician of the King of Wurttemberg; they were ideally happy together, but after six years he died, and two years later she died in Munich.

She published many novels; a particularly interesting one is called "A Fellow and His Wife," which she wrote in collaboration with William Sharp.

Philippines Consider Program For Defense

With Independence Looming, Islanders Hope MacArthur Will Be Named Commissioner.

By Vincente Albano Pacis.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Manila.

TWO new vital and urgent Philippine problems have shaped themselves since Congress passed the Philippine independence law—the matter of locating new markets for Philippine products when the American market is no longer accessible, and the question of national defense once the American Army and Navy leave the Philippines at the mercy of Japan and other powers likely to want additional territories.

Of these two problems, that of markets is more fundamentally important since it involves the country's wherewithal, and its solution implies a degree of prosperity which may even have armies and navies as part and parcel. The question of national defense is, however, nearer the hearts of the people because it is more graphically vivid and vital because even the uninstructed can understand that without naval and military establishments, there is no safety for the country.

It is certain, if Congress should decide to continue to open the American markets to Philippine products indefinitely, that the Filipinos would need no prompting to accept the offer. They have, in fact, expressed in unmistakable terms that such an arrangement would be greatly acceptable to them. It should follow that if America should decide to maintain its naval and military establishments in the Philippines for an indefinite time, the Filipinos would be equally ready to entertain the offer. Be it said, however, that, on the contrary, they have sought the simultaneous withdrawal of the American Army and Navy from the islands upon the grant of final independence.

America's side of the matter is slightly different at that. With respect to markets, it can be said that the Philippines are in a position to extend full reciprocity, since their own market which America itself has developed into the richest in the Orient, is actually and potentially profitable.

• • • •

IT is probably because of the certainty that America would not care to continue being responsible for the safety of the islands unless it also continues to be sovereign over them that the Filipinos are now vitally concerned with building their own defense establishments.

All in all, there are today some 6,000 Filipinos with first-class military training, some 5,000 with semi-military training, and possibly 10,000 who have had military science in school or college. Although Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo's Revolutionary Veterans Association is reputed to have a membership of 10,000, the actual veterans among them, though certainly experienced in defensive warfare, are now largely decrepit, and the able-bodied and young are merely the descendants or kin of rebel fathers, grandfathers, uncles or cousins. The 6,000 with first-class training are actually enlisted in the Philippine Scouts, which is part of the Philippine Department of the U. S. Army and officered by Regulars. The 5,000 with semi-military training are members of the Philippine constabulary.

For commissioned officers' materials, there are in the Philippine Department of the United States Army some 15 Filipino graduates of West Point with ranks ranging from second lieutenant to major. There are also several Filipino graduates of Annapolis, but are either in the Army as commissioned officers or in private employment.

• • • •

IT is reported that American military experts friendly to the Filipino leaders—and such experts are always presumed though unconfirmed, to be Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, and Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, commanding general of the Philippine department, among others—have given assurance that with an appropriation of about $3,000,000 a year, the Philippines can in six years build a military establishment practically impregnable for defense purposes.

Such plan appears to have five important features. First, that the constabulary, which will be known as the Philippine army, will serve as the nucleus. Second, that with the consent of American Army authorities, Filipino scouts will be released from the American Army and absorbed into the Philippine army. Third, that while American Army experts will assist actively in the work of planning, organizing and training, promising young Filipinos will be sent to American Army and flying schools for advance instruction. Fourth, that the schools and colleges will be entrusted with the conduct of an intensive citizenship training coupled with the usual military science courses. And, fifth, that citizens' camps will be established throughout the country to train the citizenry in general.

IF the plan, such as outlined, is carried out it will convert the Philippines into the most military-minded country. Yet, paradoxically, the constitutional convention, just the other day, almost unanimously approved a declaration in the Philippine Constitution it is drafting to the effect that the Philippines "renounces war as an instrument of national policy!"

But so intent are the Filipino leaders on the establishment of a defense army that, in spite of the hope they have repeatedly and publicly expressed that Governor General Frank Murphy will return to the Philippines as the first American high commissioner in the new Commonwealth government, there have been unsuppressed expressions of the companion desire that Gen. MacArthur be the first commissioner instead. And, in a big way, MacArthur will be the ideal man for the position.

HOUSE OF EARTH

By PEARL BUCK

Ever-strange China at last made real

"The turning wheel of literary form, like the annual round of the changing seasons, brings perpetual refreshment to the human spirit. Yet we sometimes quarrel with our good luck . . . Every fine novel opens to its readers realms of experience wider than those of his or any single personal life. Pearl Buck's famous narrative of three generations of a Chinese family, is unique among the works of creative fiction, in that it both widens our knowledge of human life and deepens our understanding of human nature. As an absorbingly interesting story of an alien race, it acquaints us with a strange new pattern of daily existence. And because it shows these struggling, loving, hoping, despairing, toiling Chinese men and women to be profoundly human, the author's insight into the meaning of their lives makes the meaning of our own lives clearer to us."

—DOROTHY CANFIELD

WHAT we here propose to you is this: mail the inquiry coupon below to us, and a copy of this fine library edition of House of Earth will immediately be put aside in your name, and held until we hear whether or not you decide to join. In the meantime, a booklet will at once be sent to you outlining in detail how the Club operates.

Study this booklet at your leisure; have the members of your family do likewise; you may be surprised, for instance, to learn that belonging to the Club does not mean you have to pay any fixed sum each year; nor, as many people imagine, that you are obliged to take one book every month (you may take as few as four a year); nor even that you are obliged in any month to take the specific book-of-the-month selected by the judges. You have complete freedom of choice at all times. You share in the book-dividends distributed (free books given to members on the basis of their purchases) which have amounted close to $1,000,000 each year for three years. Moreover, you are kept completely informed at all times by monthly reports, without a cent of expense, about all the important new books.

Here is a very interesting fact; over 100,000 families—and highly judicious readers they are, judging by the books they select—now get most of their books through the Book-of-the-Month Club; and of these tens of thousands of people not a single one was induced to join by a salesman; every one of them joined upon his own initiative, upon the recommendation of friends who were members, or after simply reading—as we ask you to do—the bare facts about the many ways in which membership in the Club benefits you as a book-reader and book-buyer.

If you would like to receive a copy of House of Earth, mail the coupon at once (it is an inquiry merely and involves no obligation); then, after reading the booklet referred to, if you decide to join, the free copy being reserved in your name will at once be shipped to you.

"GEMS OF BURLESQUE." Independent Burlesque Association production in two acts and 24 scenes, with Mike Sachs, Earl Root, Floyd Hallicy, Bobby Gordon, Frank Smith, Alice Kennedy, Billy Lamont, Marie Allely, Ann Le Morris, Peggy Hill, the Mack Sisters, and the Dancing Bryanettes. Book of Dot Plate; dances routined by Frank Bryant. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitaker.

Working in rare form, Mike Sachs and Frank Smith are the most dazzling sparklers in a notable array of "Gems of Burlesque." Indeed, so effective did they work at yesterday's opening performance that the rest of the show lost some of the impressiveness that is manifestly possessed by the feminine members of the company, as well as by the supporting comedians.

Although favorites with Ninth street audiences for a long time, Sunday afternoons have never seen the Messrs. Sachs and Smith work so spontaneously or be so excruciatingly funny as yesterday.

Keeping the audience continuously in an appreciative uproar, Mr. Sachs proves himself not only a master at handling farcical lines but also in utilizing eyes, mouth and hands with telling pantomimic effect. And when he teams up, in his third appearance, with Bobby Gordon, he virtually slays his listeners.

Tangle-talking Frank Smith is no less in top form. From the first crack out of the bag he convulses the audience with gags—some new, some old, but all provocative of deep-seated guffaws.

Beauty on Display.

On the distaff side, the top would in all probability, be titian-topped Peggy Hill, with Ann LaMorris and Marie Allely running close seconds. All three of the display artistes handle their tantalizing routines with finesse, leaving little to be desired from this department of modern burlesque.

The Mack Sisters—Shirley and Billie—are seen in acrobatic routines, and Lucille Wayne does a nice slow tap number. Alice Kennedy sings, and, while she is no Grace Moore, does her best work in a couple of excerpts from "Madame Butterfly." Billy LaMont is the soubrette.

Back on the male side again, Earl Root and Floyd Hallicy are the straight men and furnish the baritone and tenor warbling.

Danville, Va., March 10.—Danville's motorcycle police will be no more within a few weeks. The police commission has arrived at the conclusion that the motorcycle policeman is passe, that he can not do effective work and has decided to trade in all the motorcycles for two small police cars.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A FRENCH actress of some years ago was famed for the freshness and beauty of her complexion. Although she was past middle age, her skin was as unwrinkled and as smooth and satiny as a child's.

Hundreds of women implored her to tell them her beauty secret and refused to believe her when she denied having one.

"As a matter of fact," she is reputed to have said, "if I had a magic formula or a beauty secret of any kind I'd be one of the first to tell it to the world. But I haven't. True enough, I take a milk bath every day and I believe this softens and lightens my skin. But a milk bath—there's no mystery about that."

She was right. There is no mystery about a milk bath, but there's a deal of extravagance. Can't you just imagine ordering 10 to 20 quarts of extra milk each morning for your bath? And can't you just see your husband's face when the bills arrive?

Well, there's no need to contemplate such an extravagance. One of our enterprising cosmeticians offers a package arranged especially for a facial milk bath. The contents are sufficient for at least a dozen such treatments.

In the pack is a blue jar which contains powdered skim milk and egg albumen, and also a bottle of special solution. With the aid of a little mixing spoon also included you blend the powdered milk and the solution into a paste. Spread this over your face, allow it to harden, and then remove.

If your skin is dark, muddy or sallow, you'll notice an appreciable difference in color. If you have large pores across your nose, and blackheads in the crease of your chin, you'll see a vast improvement.

For those with very dry skin a weekly application of the milk pack is sufficient and it should not be left on to dry over five minutes. But those who have oily skins—especially skins with large pores and blackheads—should use the pack about three times a week and leave it on to dry for 15 minutes.

For Extra Skirts.

Review your wardrobe and the chances are you'll find one, two, or maybe three unattached skirts. There'll probably be a black one, or a brown one, and maybe a green or blue one.

Now, here's what to do next. Call at the neckwear department of a downtown store and ask to see the woven, striped seersucker blouses. These come in a myriad of bright color combinations to suit any skirt and are beautifully set off with tailored white pique collars and cuffs. Some of the blouses boast a row of large saucer buttons down the front.

There's not a blouse in the lot over $1.95, and since they are all washable, and long wearers, they're real bargains for the money.

Bathroom Bottles.

When was there ever such an opportunity for the housewife? Now she may buy—not only bathroom bottles—but all that goes in them, the set complete for $1 ! ! !

The bottles themselves are made of frosty-looking waffle glass, and each one is amply large. They are marked on the outside with a tab signifying the contents, and are filled with almond and benzoin lotion, olive oil shampoo, witch-hazel, bay rum, glycerin and rose water, hair dressing, mouthwash and an alcohol rub.

Just imagine what it would cost you ordinarily to buy the bathroom bottles in this attractive pattern and then to buy what's needed to fill them. . . . Find your total and then you'll appreciate what an amazing price $1 is.

Bargains in Bags.

Maybe $29.75 seems like a good deal of money to pay for an overnight case. But, on the other hand, maybe it isn't so much after all. Your "yes" or "no" depends entirely on what you expect from a bag. If you want one that looks its worth, one that will last—and last, a bag that will stand any strain, one that has a strong silk lining and is made of fine calfskin, and fitted with ten pieces, then here's your bag.

The price includes a good suede cover with nameplate and letters.

To Spring.

UNSULLIED SPRING, O just about-to-begin:
Fresh river-flags, cold crocuses, low bed
Of deep-dyed violets where snows have been;
Tulips as pale as butter, or as red
As Aphrodite's bosom where it bled;
Sweetpeas crowded together, dappled with dew
Pushing the fence . . . And over all the spell
Of a rich, rank, germinating smell
Out of the earth, and odour green and brown . . .
Bushes of rainy lilacs weighted down.

O spring, O light of limb, O lovely-stepping one,
Brushing the speared grass, leading the warm sun;
O leafy glade, unspoiled, unspotted, cool,
Dipping your matted roots into the rain's pool:
Mortal am I, mortal and twisted with pain,
But I would begin, too—I would begin again.

Beware of Caution.

BEWARE OF caution—and be wise!
Spend all you have in wild unthrift:
None but the violent storm the skies;
None but the reckless win for prize
God's all-unguarded gift.

"He who would save his life." "Sell all Thou hast." "Lend, asking naught again."
"Take no thought for the morrow":—call
Such counsels folly: profit small
For calculating men.

Sleeps out his thousand dismal years.
But you—with God for goal and goad—
Wing upward, feathered by the load
Of desperate hopes and fears.

Forbidden Theme.

SUN, DANCE NEVER again with slender trees.
Never let soft May rain fall; never let the bees
Fill in gold cups the lily's residue.

Starling, skylark, muffle your evening song
Over the meadows of mallow; brooks, be still;
Locust, katydid, never again prolong
Your violins upon a seagirt hill.

Let every flower fall, let every blade
Of lush grass dry, let nothing move or sing—
Or we might dare to fancy through a glade
Comes back the aching beauty of the spring.

And if we dreamed and, waking, found her here
So overpowering, we could not refrain
This hundred thousandth time to call her dear,
And chant her sacred flowering again.

SHE TALKED to me and talked to me
Without an intervening pause,
Of lovely things I'd never seé;
And gravely pitied me because

I lacked the broadening vision
Travel gives. "A muted chord
Your life has been," still reasoning
She said. Whereas I thought it odd

She failed in spite of brilliant poise
To sense the love that filled my room;
Or note a heavy-petaled rose
That madly spilled its crimson bloom.

A SEA GULL cleaves the sky with gleaming white
A little while apart to watch his flight:
To watch the slender curve of beauty brush
Its brief imprint. A short, short time to yearn
For things beloved, that never can return!

Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

William Johnson—Catherine Weissenburg.

A Cinderella romance was that of Catherine Weissenburg, indentured Dutch girl who met her Prince Charming in the person of William Johnson who came to the Mohawk Valley as Commissioner of Indian Affairs for New York. The two were married and Catherine became the mistress of Mount Johnson, a country estate.

Young Irishman Won Fame in Dealing With Indians.

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

IN THE ILLUSTRIOUS roll of nation builders, no name shines in greater brilliance in the tangled relations with the Indian than that of William Johnson, a young Irishman of good family and the moral successor of Roger Williams and William Penn in dealing with the red man.

In 1738 William Johnson came to New York to assume management of the estate of his uncle, Sir Peter Warren, whose lands included the present Mohawk Valley. By 1746 so great a knowledge had Johnson obtained of the Indians that he was appointed commissioner of New York for Indian affairs.

He became known as "The Indian Guardian" of New York and the tribes regarded him almost as a blood brother, had confidence in his wisdom, his justice and regard for their race. Adopted into the Mohawk tribe and often seen in its war paint he became known as "Johnson of the Mohawks." The tradition of his life and deeds is cherished by descendants of the tribe today.

Sent to Mohawk Valley.

Johnson, when he arrived in America got a hearty welcome from one of the most picturesque figures in colony, Admiral Peter Warren whose house in New York City at No. 1 Broadway was on a plot of land which Arthur Pound, author of "Johnson of the Mohawks," says would now be worth at least $21,000,000. Peter Warren's house was historic in its day and over its ample threshold passed such Colonial worthies as Gens. Lee, Putnam, Washington, Howe, Clinton and Carleton.

Young Johnson fell quickly into the tempo of life in Colonial New York. He was a handsome, impetuous charmer. Desiring to give the lad a start, Admiral Peter put him in charge of some of his lands in the Mohawk Valley. There an entirely new type of living was spread before young William's eyes. Save for the scattered homesteads of brave white pioneers and their families, Mohawk Valley was a vast wilderness, the frontier of the American colonies.

There is reason to believe that William Johnson, then in his late twenties, arrived in the wilderness, heart and fancy free. Near at hand was Catherine Weissenburg, a relative of the Rev. Jacob Weissenburg, it is said, perhaps a daughter, history has forgotten to be explicit. Catherine was indentured as a domestic, a custom of those days in the frontier. Her golden plaits and blue eyes took firm hold on the affections of William Johnson.

So William courted Catherine and perhaps some of the neighbors were a little shocked as they saw them strolling through the paths of Warrensburg, he with the glamour of Wooed Indentured Maid, Who Became Mistress of Fine Estate.

Admiral Peter's means and career behind him and she a maid of all work in another's home. In order to free her from her indentures, Johnson had to buy her; that is, pay the price that kept her from being entirely free of her bonds. Thus in a double sense he would become her owner, as husband and purchaser.

The exact date of the marriage is disputed. But the best evidence is supplied by a plain gold ring, found in Johnson's possessions after his death. Inside the ring was this engraved—June 16, 1739.

She had the joy of being mistress of Johnson's new home, "Mount Johnson," for a long time a landmark in the valley. Many notables of colonial days visited there.

But she did not enjoy her home long. She died at 25, leaving three children. The eldest of these, Anna, married Maj. Daniel Claus, one of Sir William's aides in the Indian service.

Wed by Indian Rites.

Johnson found solace in several other romances. There is a tradition of a marriage by Indian rites to a certain Caroline Peters, niece of Hendrik Peters, the adopted head of the Mohawks and the trusted friend of Johnson. Her child was William of Canajoharie, whose career was nearly as colorful as that of his father. Like her predecessor's, Caroline Johnson's happiness was brief, dying, some authorities state, about 1752.

William Johnson had a splendid record in the military service of his king during the French and Indian struggles. What part he would have taken in the American Revolution, whether faithful to his king or to his adopted country, is idle to conjecture, for he died on the eve of that great conflict, having lived a full life and a useful one.

Sir William's will contained this clause: "My body I direct to be decently interred in the place which I intend for it; and I would willingly have the remains of my beloved wife, Catherine, deposited there, if not done before my decease."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: For several years I have been pals with a fellow who lives in our block but now we are busting up over a girl. She was my girl friend but I found out by accident a week ago she has been going with him too, and what sickens me is that they seem to think it was a good joke to be getting away with something behind my back.

* * * *

I thought the world of this fellow. We always studied together, went away to the same summer camp together twice, and spent most of our spare time together. Then we met this girl at a dance. I fell for her hard and asked her for a date that night, for the the next night. She agreed to it, and we started going together regularly. That was last October.

* * * *

My friend didn't say much about it one way or another, and for all I could see, was only a fair weather sort of friend to her. He acted just about the way you'd expect a man to act toward the girl of his best friend, friendly and polite, but not overly interested.

* * * *

I usually had about three dates a week with this girl, and we got along fine together. One night last week I happened to be downtown about 10 o'clock and I saw my girl and this friend come out of a show together. I couldn't believe my eyes and then they caught sight of me. They both laughed, said "hello," and went on without another word.

* * * *

The next day I approached this fellow and asked him what it meant. He said, "What do you think?" He wouldn't give me any satisfaction, and wouldn't say how long he'd been dating her. He told me to ask her and if she wanted to tell me, all right.

* * * *

I called her for a date that night and when I got there, she acted just as usual. I told her plenty and asked her what kind of a deal she and my friend were trying to pull. She got mad and wouldn't say much. She told me I didn't own her, and besides, if this fellow was such a dear friend of mine as I always seemed to think he was, why not ask him what was going on. I put on my hat and left.

* * * *

I haven't spoken to either one of them since. But the bottom seems to have dropped out of everything. If either one of them had offered me any kind of a reasonable explanation, or if I knew which one was most to blame, it wouldn't be so bad. But now I don't feel I can trust either one of them.

* * * *

In a case of this kind, who do you think is most to blame—the fellow or the girl? I am crazy about this girl and I thought the world of this fellow, and I would like to have my faith in one of them upheld, but I don't know how to get to the bottom of the case. I guess I gave both of them a good piece of my mind, and I don't know whether the next move is up to me or or them. What do you think?

DOUBLE-CROSSED.

Girl Is Responsible.

DEAR DOUBLE-CROSSED: No doubt I am letting down the fair sex in saying so, but I believe the girl is more to blame than the boy. After all, it seems logical to suppose the boy wouldn't have ventured to pay court to his best friend's best girl if she hadn't by subtle means conveyed the impression such attentions would be welcomed.

* * * *

Had it been necessary for him to make aggressive overtures to her the fact could not have escaped your notice, I think, and had she not been willing, for some inexplicable feminine and coquettish reason, to envelope the flirtation with the glamour of secrecy, she would from the first have casually remarked that your friend was soliciting her company, it seems to me.

* * * *

If and when she did make it apparent to your friend she was casting a flirtatious eye in his direction, he was prohibited by the traditional code governing the conduct of a gentleman in such matters, from revealing his surmise or his conviction to you.

* * * *

I judge from your letter you are not yet out of your teens and I fear the two of you are as malleable as a piece of putty in the hands of this budding coquette. With the traditional ruthlessness of the female of the species—reputed to be "more deadly than the male"—this girl is, I suspect, breaking up your friendship for no better reason than to reassure her ego by demonstrating her power over men.

* * * *

Certainly in your latest conversation with her she gave no indication she cares for one of you more than another; her reference to your "dear friend" was rather poisonously treacherous and should cause you to wonder what barbs she may have directed at you when accepting his attentions; and she showed a lack of integrity in failing to deal more straightforwardly with the situation once the issue was brought into the open.

She could have dealt more tactfully and honestly with both of you, or with necesary and final cruelty with one of you. If she really cared for either of you, she would not try to damn that one in the other's eyes. She has made your friend look like a sneak, and you like a fool.

I would forget the girl entirely and leave it up to the other fellow to make the first move in reinstating himself in your good graces.

What Today Means

"Pisces."

IF MARCH 11 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m.

Should you be the victim of rudeness on this date, do not permit it to upset your disposition. Rudeness can usually be traced to either lack of cultural advantages, loss of temper, presumption, or just a naturally churlish disposition, so why should you allow the bad attributes of another affect you in the slightest degree? Business may show some very promising signs for an active market this week.

Married and engaged couples as well as those expecting to see some dearly beloved one on this date, will show good judgment if they will remember either personal or domestic slovenliness is about the most discouraging trait one can discover in anyone he really cares very much about.

If a woman, and March 11 is your birthday, you have probably a great deal of self-control, which should be found to be very helpful in advancing you in either a social or business way.

You should be very successful in commercial life, or an artistic career. Dramatic, or literary work, writing, as well as sketching or painting, may be among the activities through which you may make considerable money, if you do the right amount of preparatory work.

If a man, your desire for distinction will undoubtedly spur you on until your hopes are realized. A wife with business acumen may help you to solve many a problem, if you discuss your business affairs with her. Politics, law, science, journalism and art have plenty of room at the top for an ambitious man.

Old Favorites Sure to Please Family Taste

Baked Potatoes Are Always Delectable; Try Them Dutch Style.

By Dorothea Duncan.

MONDAY brings the same thought to every housewife, "Another series of weekly menus to plan." Don't let the idea get you down. Remember that your family will be overjoyed to see some of the simple old favorites come to the table, even more frequently than the elaborate dishes.

Think of little ways to save steps and work in the kitchen. For example, your hands will be mighty thankful if you occasionally give them a rest from peeling potatoes. Buy some of the little red new potatoes so recently come into the markets. Cook them with the jackets on and after they are slightly cool, you will find that the skin peels off "in a jiffy." Cream them or serve them with melted butter and finely chopped parsley. Serve baked potatoes more often. Both sweet and Irish potatoes, are family favorites if baked. A bit of cheese, the soft kind that melts easily, will be a happy thought squeezed into the top of a freshly baked Idaho potato.

If your family has not already established Dutch potatoes as one of its favorite dishes, it will after your have served them once. The children especially will be very fond of this dish that combines baked potatoes, frankfurter sausages and bacon. The housewife will like them because they are easy to prepare and combine two dishes in one, eliminating an extra pan. Here is the way they should be prepared.

Dutch Potatoes.

6 potatoes
6 frankfurters
6 slices of fat salt pork or bacon
Pepper

Bake in Very Hot Oven.

Scrub medium sized potatoes; pare or leave the skins on as preferred. With an apple corer, cut a tunnel through the center of each, lengthwise. Draw through each cavity one of the frankfurters. Place in a dripping pan and lay a blanket of fat salt pork or thick slice of bacon on each potato. Pepper lightly and bake in a very hot oven (450-500 degrees F.) until the potatoes are tender, basting occasionally with the drippings and a little hot water.

Somehow, spinach is unusually good when served in combination with Dutch potatoes. Use canned spinach for a change. It will save time and energy, and you will be sure that it is tender and free from grit. The can may be plunged into boiling water for half an hour until the contents are thoroughly heated. Then you can serve it in one of a number of ways. Try chopping the spinach quite fine and mix it with a rich, but thin white sauce. After the spinach has been placed in the serving dish, top it with the yolks of hard cooked eggs run through a sieve and the whites cut petal fashion. This bit of a garnish will raise the everyday dish out of the commonplace.

A Salad-Dessert.

Now for one of those salads that will serve as a dessert as well. Try orange walnut cheese salad and make it according to the following recipe.

Orange Walnut Cheese Salad.

5 or 6 oranges
24 halves of walnut kernels
1 small package (3 ounce cake) cream cheese

Peel oranges, removing skin and inner membrane down to juicy meat. Cut one orange in slices. Cut out segments free from membrane from the remaining oranges. On lettuce covered salad plate center a large slice of orange. Arrange three groups of orange (three segments to a group) around this orange slice. Moisten cheese with a little orange juice, shape into balls and press walnut halves into two sides. Place one of these walnut cheese bon bons between each group of orange segments. Garnish orange slices with strips of pimento. Serve with French dressing.

Dinner Menu.

Dutch potatoes
Creamed spinach with hard cooked egg
Orange walnut cheese salad
Whole wheat bread and butter
Coffee Milk (for children)

HOW to KEEP WELL

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Accident Preparedness.

THIS is First Aid Week and we are reminded that everyone should know something about first aid, especially those who are in charge of a number of persons.

When an accident occurs, time is usually an important factor, but even in injuries the old saying, "Haste makes waste," holds good. A bleeding artery, however, will not wait, and pressure must be applied without delay and with the least possible damage to the soft structures of the body.

Fainting, collapse, or convulsions are alarming symptoms. Convulsion may come from so many causes that it is far wiser to place the patient so that he can not injure himself than to proceed with active measures that may do harm. Then wait for the physician. Collapse or signs of heart or circulatory failure may be relieved by the administration of a teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia in a little water. In severe abdominal pain, permit the patient to lie in the position that will give him the most comfort, keep him warm, and let him alone until medical aid can be secured.

Major Corporations Report Substantial Income Gains for 1934

U. S. Steel Cuts Loss for Year By $14,833,343

Output, Pay Roll, Prices All Rise; 1935 Better, Taylor Says.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 10.—The United States Steel Corporation operated at a loss of $21,667,779 in 1934 as shown in the annual pamphlet report made public today. The loss was before allowing for dividends of 2 per cent paid on the preferred stock. After this payment the deficit was $28,873,401.

The deficit before dividends reported for last year was $14,833,343 smaller than the loss in 1933 of $36,501,122. Gross business was $591,609,497 in 1934, while the corresponding total for the previous year was $524,968,768.

The year's production of rolled and finished steel products was 6,004,585 tons, or 31 per cent of capacity, while in 1933 production was 5,536,322 tons or 29 per cent of capacity.

The corporation's pay rolls for the year amounted to $210,503,333, an increase of nearly one-third over the previous annual figure, and the number of workers employed rose 10 per cent to a total of 189,881 persons.

The average prices received for its output by the company increased about 11 per cent for products shipped in the United States and about 7 per cent for export sales.

Concerning the year's operations, Myron C. Taylor, chairman, said that "some further progress has been made from the very low point to which they had dropped in 1932. It may be stated that January and February 1935 operations are substantially in excess of those which prevailed in the corresponding months of 1934."

Simon Guggenheim, president, said: "Under the copper code, current production must first be sold, and then stocks, both proportionately among code members. In the last six months, the market has been fully supplied by current production and no additional stocks have been sold. There is not, therefore, a free market in the United States for the sale of stocks."

Business Activity Levels Out; Other Factors Disturb Outlook

Future of Sterling May Be Dominant Element in Our Position.

RALPH ROBEY.

By Ralph Robey.

Business reports as a whole last week were more favorable than they have been for over a month. Most of the more widely followed indices moved upward. In no case was the improvement spectacular, but it was sufficient in the aggregate to break the downtrend that has been in force since the first part of February.

Among financial and economic analysts, nevertheless, the improvement attracted little attention. Their time was occupied by attempting to appraise the other and more sensational developments that characterized the week. Among these were the violent fluctuations in the foreign exchange market, the extraordinary statement of President Roosevelt on prices at his press conference on Wednesday, and the diverting, although significant, fight between Gen. Johnson, Senator Long and Father Coughlin.

Also receiving considerable attention during the week were the overruling of Comptroller McCarl by the Administration, the continuing legislative jam in Congress, the undercurrent of opposition that is developing to much of the current legislative program of the New Deal, and the apparent rapid loss of prestige of the President as an active leader.

Sterling Holds Attention Among Foreign Exchanges.

In the foreign exchange market the spotlight was held for the most part by British pounds sterling, although French francs came to the fore in interest for a brief while on Wednesday. It is the action of sterling, nevertheless, that is of principal concern to those trying to look a little into the future. For it is quite possible that in the action of sterling—or the conditions giving rise to the action of sterling—will be found the answer to the course of world recovery in the next several months.

Such a view means that the recent drop of sterling has not been the result of manipulation by the British government operating through the equlization fnud. It means, rather, that the decline is to be credited to underlying economic and financial factors—factors which, rightly or wrongly, have convinced those with surplus funds in London that it is desirable to seek other centers for investment.

That this movement of capital from London is the real reason for the drop of about 25 cents in pounds during the last few weeks is now generally accepted by the analysts. In fact some of them are even convinced that the equalization fund attempted to stop the decline in the early stages, but withdrew when the force of the movement was realized.

From a business point of view, then, the present sterling position raises two major questions: First, whether the foreign balances in London have now been sufficiently depleted to remove them as a further bearish factor on the exchange; secondly, whether the underlying conditions that gave rise to the movement of these "nervous" balances have been sufficiently adjusted to prevent a flight of domestic capital from London.

It always is difficult to give a definite answer to such questions. It is the opinion of those following the London position, however, that on the whole there is not much more "nervous" money to move. On the second question—the problem of underlying conditions—opinion is less unanimous. I think it is reasonably accurte to say, nevertheless, that the consensus is that while England probably reached the peak of her recent recovery at about the end of the year, a sharp decline is not in order at this time unless world conditions become more disturbed.

President's Price Views Have Disturbing Effect.

Closely related to the course of sterling during the week, and directly connected with its more violent fluctuatio..s, was the statement of President Roosevelt on Wednesday that he does not think our price level is high enough in relation to our debts. The statement came at a time when the stock market was drifting lower, the Government bond market was showing great strength, and the dollar was rising against foreign currencies. Immediately upon the release of the statement all this was changed. The stock market bounded forward at a terrific pace, Government bonds dropped over a quarter of a point, and the dollar lost some 5 cents in terms of sterling. Then, with a denial of the implications of the statement by the White House, the stock market lost its earlier gains, sterling fell again close to its earlier low, and Government bonds ceased their headlong plung.

But—and this is the important aspect of the whole episode—Government bonds did not regain their strength. In other words, while the statement had no lasting effect upon stock prices or the foreign exchange market, it was a disservice to the Government bond market and added a quite needless handicap to the current refunding operation of the Treasury. It necessitated, if the opinions of observers can be trusted, the Treasury entering the market and supporting its obligations to the extent of several millions of dollars and created a nervousness among Government bond holders that even at the end of the week had not been completely dissipated although prices had recovered.

This price recovery and the dissipation of nervousness, such as it was, may be attributed directly to the prompt disclaimer from the White House that the President's statement implied a further reduction in the gold value of the dollar. Had such a disclaimer not been issued it is quite possible that the current refunding operation would have been a failure, just as the operation in the fall of 1933 was a failure because of the adoption of the Warren gold-buying program. In view of the disclaimer, however, every one is convinced that the current operation will be a success.

Johnson-Long Fight Holds Threat to Business Confidence.

The attack of Gen. Johnson on Senator Long and Father Coughlin, and the reply of Senator Long, have been of primary interest to business analysts because of the possible effect the fight may have upon the willingness of business men to make long-term commitments. More bluntly, the controversy raises the question of what will happen in the 1936 election. Upon the political aspect of such a question, business analysts, of course, have little basis for a judgment.

They have a quite adequate basis, however, for knowing that political uncertainty of the kind introduced by the growing strength of Senator Long is a serious deterrent to business activity. Their conclusion, therefore, is that, while as a whole they thoroughly agree with the charges made by Gen. Johnson and personally are delighted that some one had the courage to make such charges, it is far from certain that the general by his speech helped the outlook for recovery. They feel, on the contrary, it may well prove to be that he has added to the strength of Senator Long and thereby has thrown into question the whole issue of the kind of a New Deal, if any, we shall have after 1936.

Such a view, it should be emphasized, has nothing to do with either supporting or not supporting the New Deal, or thinking that it is or is not materially better than Senator Long's program. Neither does the view imply a prognostication on the next presidential election. Rather, all that it means is that if the controversy adds much to the strength of the Long-Coughlin group, business men will become more hesitant about entering into long-term contracts and recovery will be made more difficult.

Cash Cotton 20 Points Down

Tax Exemption of 2-Bale Farmer Adds to Decline of Staple.

By the Associated Press.

Cash cotton lost 20 points during the week, and futures even more, due to a combination of circumstances in which no small part was played by official announcement that the "two-bale" farmer would be exempted from tax provision of the Bankhead cotton control act.

The average price of middling ⅞-inch cotton dropped from 12.58 cents a bale to 12.38 in the spot markets. May futures at New Orleans moved from 12.46 cents down to 12.13-14, and at New York from 12.45-46 to 12.12-13 cents a pound.

By the proposed exemption, any farmer whose base production of cotton regularly is two bales or less annually would be freed from the Bankhead tax regardless of whether he was an owner, tenant or sharecropper It is estimated in the trade that 1,250,000 to 2,250,000 bales may be affected.

Should the exemption send tenants and share-croppers back to the land they lost when owners cut production in line with the control act, some believe 5,000,000 bales of cotton might be added to the total crop.

Cotton prices were depressed by continued dullness in cotton cloth markets, accumulation of unsold stocks of cloth, and fewer inquiries for raw cotton for both domestic and foreign account.

Downward Trend Predicted for Spring

New York, March 10.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co., of New York, currently commented as follows:

"March industrial volumes will compare favorably with those of the preceding month, but after allowing for the normal seasonal increase during the month the Standard Statistics Co. index of production will record a moderate decline. Unless the building industry and other heavy lines are able to score worth-while improvement this spring—which, at the present, is by no means assured—the trend of aggregate industrial activity will be definitely downward during the late spring and early summer months.

Municipal Tax Loss Checked

Increase Is Halted for First Time in Five Years, Survey Reports.

New York, March 10.—For the first time in five years, the steady and somewhat alarming increase in the uncollected taxes of major cities throughout the United States was definitely halted during 1934, according to a survey just published by the municipal service department of Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

Of 153 cities of over 50,000 population for which comparative 1933 and 1934 figures were obtained, 127, or 87 per cent, showed an increase in the percentage of current taxes collected for 1934 as compared with 1933.

"While in many instances the gain was negligible, in a few outstanding cases it was sufficient to reduce tax delinquencies to the 1931 or 1930 levels," states Dr. Frederick L. Bird, who made the survey. "There was a continued decline in current tax collections in 26 cities, but in practically every instance it was very small. As compared with an average tax delinquency of 25.9 per cent for the 153 cities in 1933, last year's figures declined to 22.7 per cent.

"This very moderate degree of improvement is far from being completely reassuring, but it nevertheless offers some encouragement. While the average end-of-the-year delinquency for the group of cities fell short of being reduced even to the 1932 level, there are a number of reasons for assuming a mildly optimistic point of view."

Richmond, Va., is one of the cities in which the increase in delinquencies has been conspicuously below average. Unpaid taxes exceed full year's levy in 13 municipalities, according to the survey.

California Avocado Crop Up 500 Per Cent

Los Angeles, March 10 (AP).—A 500 per cent increase in California's avocado crop in a single year was reported today in a forecast predicting a probable total yield for 1935 of 20,000,000 pounds. The avocado is a salad fruit.

"The 20,000,000 pound crop estimated for this year is a 500 per cent increase over that of 1934 and will be by far the greatest ever produced in California," said George B. Hodgkins, secretary-manager of the Calavo growers of California.

Westinghouse Reports Profit; Sales Up 39%

1934 Net is $189,562 Against 1933 Loss of $8,636,841.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 10.—The annual report of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. for the year ended December 31, 1934, just released, shows a net income earned of $189,562. This compares with a net loss of $8,636,841 reported for the year 1933. These results are after provision for depreciation and other reserves.

In the report, A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board, and F. A. Merrick, president, say in part:

"Sales billed for 1934 totaled $92,158,893, compared with $66,431,591 for 1933. This was an increase of 39 per cent.

"Orders received totaled $106,473,226, compared with $72,473,117 in 1933, an increase of 47 per cent. Unfilled orders at the close of the year amounted to $34,085,921, compared with $26,954,044 at December 31, 1933.

"On December 31, 1934, current assets amounted to $80,328,712 and current liabilities to $6,122,180, a net working capital of $74,206,532.

"The company has no bank loans or bonded indebtedness outstanding. There has been no change in the amount of its issued capital stock.

"During the year dividends of $3.50 a share, totaling $279,919, were declared and paid on the preferred stock of the company.

"The consolidated companies disbursed $47,321,400 in payroll payments, and gave employment to an average of 35,281 persons during the year. In 1933 the total payroll amounted to $36,047,031, with an average of 29,980 persons employed."

The report added:

"The public criticism of business that has characterized the recent past, now seems to have run its course. Human affairs are subject to great emotional stress. The breaking point may seem to be reached. Disaster may appear inevitable, but at the last moment citizens of our Nation have a saving factor of good sense that enables them to right their affairs. The country has been going through a severe emotional period. Many things are still unsettled and more or less in turmoil. Our economic life is beset with critics and schemes to change everything that our fathers planned and built. Some things undoubtedly should be changed, but many will be found serviceable and valuable in the years to come.

"Unless there is a marked change for the worse, the operations of the company for the year 1935 will show a substantial profit."

Legislature Meets Today On Tax Issue

Extra Session in West Virginia to Provide School Fund.

By Robert H. Horner.
A Special Correspondent.

Charleston, W. Va., March 10.—Because it was unable to agree over appropriations for the free school system at the regular 1935 session, which adjourned sine die at midnight Saturday by constitutional limitation, the West Virginia Legislature will meet at noon tomorrow in an extended session, at which it may consider only the $52,000,000 biennial budget bill. The session may run only through Thursday, the adjournment date fixed by Gov. H. K. Kump in his proclamation.

Failure to pass the budget bill during the closing days of the regular session was due to a contest waged over a rider in the budget bill which both houses struck out. It called for restoring school teachers' basic salaries to what they were a year ago, and its defeat represented a triumph on the part of State School Superintendent W. W. Trent and leaders of school organizations over Gov. Kump's plan to force the counties to pay salary increases to their own teachers.

$10,500,000 in Budget.

The budget bill contains appropriations of $10,500,000 for each of the next two years, to be paid out as State aid for teachers' salaries. The Governor insisted that this would take care of the basic salaries, and any additional salaries would have to be paid by the local boards. For the State to grant increases, he contended, would mean that more revenue would have to be raised, and, in his opinion, all new revenue sources have been exhausted.

Now that both houses have struck from the bill the rider which would have shifted the additional burden to the counties, it is up to the Legislature to find more revenue.

It is doubtful, however, that any more tax bills, other than those already enacted at the regular session, will be passed and it is generally believed a compromise will be reached by reducing other items in the appropriation bill to make up the difference for the teachers.

When the legislators struck the Governor's provision from the budget bill, it was looked upon by many as one more step toward the eventual taking over by the State of the entire school system. The State already is paying nearly half of school costs.

Aside from tax bills, the Legislature passed only one major measure at the regular session. This was the bill that created the State liquor commission, which is now organizing for the operation of State-owned liquor stores in all counties.

60 Day Delay Seen.

The commission has announced that it will be about 60 days before it can open its first stores in the larger cities, because it must find warehouses to store its stocks and must lease store buildings, all of which is causing delay. Meanwhile, it has under consideration a plan to authorize drug stores to sell liquors until it can begin to function as a selling corporation.

A great-grand nephew of George Washington was made executive secretary to the West Virginia Liquor Commission late in the week. He is John Augustine Washington, who for the last two years has been chief deputy sheriff of Logan County.

The State of West Virginia has under consideration a proposal to purchase for $2,500 a collection of historical documents and articles which belonged to H. M. Calhoun, of Pendleton County, who died a few months ago. If purchased, the documents and articles will be placed in the state department of archives and history at the capitol.

Among the most valuable of the relics is a set of handcuffs which were used on John Brown, at Harpers Ferry.

Hagerstown Council to Outlaw Fortune Telling and 'Hex' Cults

Numerous Reports of 'Gypping' Spur Mayor to Draft Law Repealing Present Statute Permitting Practice Under $100 License.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., March 10.—The mayor and council will outlaw fortune-telling and all so-called "hex" practices.

Announcement was made today that an ordinance is being prepared prohibiting the practice of fortune-telling here and will be made a law at the next meeting.

Fortune-telling is legal here now, each medium being assessed $100 annually to operate.

The new ordinance will repeal the law here, which says that "all persons engaged in fortune-telling or revealing the future fortune or events of one's life by palmistry or by any other means or devices whatsoever" must pay $100 to do so.

Only recently a woman engaged in fortune-telling disappeared with $4,600 she had been given by a local railroad man to "remove a 'hex.'" Police of many cities are still hunting for her. The police also was informed that a fortune-teller had "relieved" a woman of a fur coat and two diamond rings because they were "tainted," and another woman who went to a fortune-teller here said "He is killing me step by step."

Insane Killer Is Recaptured

Harold Brown Seized After Second Escape From State Asylum.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., March 10.—Recapture of Harold Brown, "insane killer" of Glenville, who escaped from the State Insane Asylum at Weston in December, has been reported to Trooper R. M. Reger, of the Weston detachment of State police, by authorities of the Allegheny County Workhouse near Pittsburgh. Troopers went there today to bring Brown back.

In the summer of 1932, Brown seized a shotgun, ran wildly into the 4-H boys camp at the Gilmer County Fair Grounds, shot to death Conrad Thomas, of Barrackville, and seriously wounded the latter's brother, Harold Thomas, a camp instructor. Tried for murder, he was found insane. He twice escaped from the Weston Hospital.

Tobacco Thefts Held Gang 'Job'

Loot in Winchester and Woodstock Robberies Valued at $2,000.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., March 10.—That the wave of cigarette robberies that has been felt by various dealers in this section of Virginia and nearby Maryland and West Virginia is the work of an organized gang specializing in this form of loot, is the opinion of police here.

A few weeks ago a wholesale house at Woodstock was entered and the plunder carried away in a truck despite arc lights surrounding the building. Last week-end, a local warehouse was robbed of 110,000 cigarettes while no other merchandise was disturbed.

It has been learned that a short time before the local robbery, a gang was frightened from a warehouse in Brunswick, Md., and it is believed the same crew came to this city to obtain their loot.

The belief is strengthened by reports that shortly afterward gangs were seen at various points along the Baltimore & Ohio and Pennsylvania Railroad in Maryland and West Virginia.

At Sykesville, police surprised several men attempting to enter a railroad station. They returned the officers' fire after refusing to obey commands to halt.

It was pointed out that cigarettes, packed in cartons of 10,000 each, are convenient to handle and that a ready market usually can be found for the plunder which, if sacrificed at half price, still would yield a large sum if all hauls are as large as those here and at Woodstock. The loss in each case was nearly $1,000.

15-Year-Old Youth Drowns in Sound

William White Died Trying to Aid Penniless Family.

By the Associated Press.

Deal Island, Md., March 10.—A 15-year-old boy's desperate, losing battle against death in the sea was disclosed today in the finding of William White's body in shallow water near where his frail skiff sank in Tangier Sound.

His parents on the relief rolls, the youth set out from his home at Wenona yesterday in his small boat to seek driftwood in the marshy area "across the sound." He failed to return.

After an all-night search for him, an uncle, Preston Parkinson, came upon the body about three hours after dawn. The sunken boat was nearby.

The boy's body was unclad. Watermen said the lad, apparently terrorized when his boat started sinking, had removed his clothing in a determined but futile attempt to swim to safety.

William was the second member of his family to lose their lives in the sea. Several years ago, an 11-year-old brother fell out of his father's boat and drowned.

Six Convicts Escape Net In Virginia

Guards, CCC Men, Police Comb Fredericksburg Area for Fugitives.

Residents Told to 'Shoot First and Then Ask Questions.'

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 10. Six desperate criminals daring escape from a prison truck 15 miles west of this city yesterday while being taken to a State camp near Culpeper, Va., were still at liberty tonight. State penitentiary guards, CCC men, Fredericksburg police and posses of private citizens continued to comb the heavily wooded country-side in the belief the fugitives had not left the region.

Late today no trail of the fugitives could be found. Bloodhounds were used to no avail. Police instructed residents in the historic section where the men are at large to "shoot first and then ask questions."

The felons, all second and third offenders facing long prison terms, gained freedom when the "bull" chain that bound them with eight other prisoners was severed by one of the convicts with a hack-saw. Working quietly beneath blankets that protected them from the cold, the convicts freed themselves while an unarmed guard looked on, unaware of what was occurring.

In the front cab of the truck was a driver and an armed guard, also ignorant of the break until notified by the rear guard.

With the words, "Let's go," the six leaped up from the bottom of the truck, hopped over the 5-foot-high slat sideboards and ran to freedom in the adjoining woods. All disappeared before the truck could be halted.

Among the group is Thomas Bates, 28-year-old Negro, of Richmond, Va., who was sentenced to serve 20 years for a murder in that city early in 1934. The other five, three of whom are Negroes, were sentenced for housebreaking. They had been sentenced again in Richmond for other offenses and were being returned to their camp when the break came.

The white men are Charles E. Beckner, 36, serving 14 years for housebreaking in Richmond, and James Lee, 38, serving 6 years for housebreaking in Caroline County. The Negroes include James Barley, 27, serving a 6-year-term for housebreaking and larceny in Newport News; Thomas Bates, 28, 20 years for murder in Richmond; Jesse Montgomery, 32, 13 years for housebreaking in Richmond, and George Preston, 26, 12 years for housebreaking in Roanoke.

The prisoners were dressed in khaki clothing similar to that worn by CCC camp workers.

Bill Reserves School Funds

West Virginia Measure Sets Up $1,200,000 to Assure Pay, Full Term.

By the Associated Press.

Charleston, W. Va., March 10.—The Senate finance committee recommended yesterday the adoption of a budget carrying $1,200,000 to assure the operation of schools for a full term. The Senate immediately went into executive session to discuss the bill.

The recommendation was based on the figures suggested by Gov. Kump, the committee having abandoned today is plan to recommend adoption of a budget similar to that of the last two years.

As three members of the finance committee described it, the bill would appropriate $1,500,000 for relief for two years instead of the $6,000,000 asked by the chief executive.

A part of the money taken out of the relief section, they said, was placed in the bill as a fund of $1,200,000 to assure that teachers' salaries will be paid in full and the schools kept open for a full term.

Conservation Bills Awaited

Dr. Truitt's Measures to Be Submitted Early This Week.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, March 10.—Early this week there will be submitted to the General Assembly a number of bills incorporating the chief recommendations contained in a conservation report of a subcommittee of the State planning commission.

The measures are being drafted by Dr. R. V. Truitt, of the University of Maryland, chairman of the sub-committee, which made its report public ten days ago.

The most significant recommendation urged revision of the Maryland laws affecting oyster-land leases in order to permit expansion of individual holdings and to allow private industry to undertake oyster cultivation in the State.

The proposed new laws covering this would be similar to those of Virginia, which grant holding up to 250 acres of oyster bottoms under one lease and make such leases available to individuals, joint stockholders or corporations.

Other recommendations, several of which will likely be incorporated in the bills, included:

A resurvey of the charted oyster bottoms in the State; development of certain areas for seed-oyster production, distribution of two-thirds of the consequent seed oysters to public bars and the remaining third to private interests; addition of new areas for leasing purposes; continuation of Maryland's shell-planting work; shortening of the blue-crab season and raising the legal minimum catch from 5 to 6 inches, and granting of wide discretionary powers to the conservation authorities.

Peanut Removed From Baby's Lung At Charlottesville

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., March 10.—Joseph Edward Doss, 14-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John V. Doss, of Alta Vista, was operated on yesterday at the University Hospital, and two peanuts were removed, one from his lung and one from the larynx.

A week ago the child was eating salted peanuts, when he choked and coughed up two peanuts. Since then he has had frequent choking and coughing spells, attendants said, and although an X-ray picture failed to reveal any foreign body in the lungs, it was decided to take the child to the hospital, where an examination revealed the peanuts.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., March 10.—James Plato Green, colored, has been acquitted of a charge of driving while drunk. Police said he was inebriated. Green countered by saying he had been cross-eyed since birth and that the affliction "makes me look like I'm drunk." Fined in the police court Green appealed. A corporation court jury believed his story and freed him.

2 Hearings Set In Auto Deaths

Youngerman, Miley to Face Manslaughter Charge in Court Today.

Two manslaughter charges arising from recent fatal accidents in Montgomery County, Maryland, will be given preliminary hearing in Montgomery County Police Court at Rockville, Md., today, State's Attorney James H. Pugh announced yesterday. Judge Donald A. DeLashmutt will preside.

In one case, Carl Youngerman, Bethesda, Md., automobile salesman, will be tried on charges of manslaughter for the death, February 10, of Harry Crawford, Bethesda barber. A car operated by Youngerman crashed into the rear of a wrecking truck on the Rockville Pike, near Bethesda. Youngerman also faces charges of unauthorized use of the car, which was owned by the auto sales firm which employed him, according to authorities. Crawford was a passenger in Youngerman's car.

Miley's passenger, William E. Marlin, of the 100 block of Flower avenue, an insurance agent, was killed. Police charge that Miley failed to heed a stop sign at the intersection.

50 Riders Join Middleburg Meet

Hunt Follows the Hounds for Three Hours.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middleburg, Va., March 10.—A field of 50 riders followed the Middleburg hounds yesterday and enjoyed the sport for three hours. The meet was at 11 o'clock from Mrs. Amory Perkins' gate. They drew Capt. C. O. Iselin's farm and started a fox in 15 minutes. The chase lasted 30 minutes and took the riders over the Iselin estate and to Turner Wiltshire's, where the animal was lost.

A second fox was started on the farm of Mrs. Nina Carter Tabb. This animal led the hunters a merry chase for 45 minutes across W. C. Seipp's farm and to Arthur White's, when the hounds also lost the fox. They next drew the White farm, across Mrs. K. E. Hitt's, and to Goodwin's estate, but the hounds failed to jump another fox and the hunt came in.

Riding today were D. C. Sands, M. F. H., and his house guests, Paul Prybill and Mrs. Ewing, of New York; Frederick Warburg, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Hulbert, Mr. and Mrs. Turner Wiltshire, Capt. C. O. Iselin and daughters, Misses Nancy and Barbara Iselin; Miss Sprague, Miss Jennie Green and Miss Eleanor Mackubin, teachers at Foxcroft School, with 20 of the school girls; James Skinner, Jack Skinner, W. C. Seipp, Miss Nannie Fred, Hugh and Mike Kerr, Charles Sabin, Louis Duffey, D. O. Furr, Sonny Furr, Buster Hall and Buddy Ward.

All-Night Search Leads to Arrest

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 10.—Louis Smith, 24, was arrested this morning in Jollett's Hollow, Page County, after an all-night search by a dozen officers who sought him for the robbery of the W. B. Meadows store at Jollett a month ago.

Smith robbed the J. C. Lam store at Jollett last night while the officers were seeking him on the other charge. Police said Smith, who is being held in jail at Luray, admitted both robberies.

From the Lam store he allegedly took canned goods, candies and cigarettes. At the place where Smith was staying officers found an automatic pistol, two new rifles and a quantity of foodstuffs believed stolen from the Meadows store. Smith was tracked several miles in the Blue Ridge Mountain foothills by marks of his hobnail shoes. Bloodhounds aided the police.

JamImpends In Final Days Of Assembly

Several Revenue Bills Continue to Be Source of Contention.

By Francis O. White, Jr.;
A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., March 10.—With the general relief program still to be threshed out, and the several revenue-producing proposals causing more or less contention, the Maryland General Assembly appears headed for a jam in the closing days of its biennial 90-day session. Tomorrow night's session here will open the last three weeks.

Over the week-end, Gov. Nice spent considerable time in further study of legislative matters, especially the financial program. And so did the members of the fiscal committees of the Senate and House, which have to do with the various revenue proposals. The Governor is said to be ready to scrap the proposed income-tax bill, a measure that was among the first to find its way to the legislative files early in the session, and to concentrate on the sales tax, beer tax and a levy on cigarettes.

Other Bills Pending.

The chief executive maintains that these offer the chief solution of the financial problem, although there are a number of other measures before committees, including the race-track bill, the proposal of which has practically deadlocked the ways and means committee of the House.

Representative Kent R. Mullikin, Prince Georges County, majority floor leader in the House, and chairman of the ways and means group is the sponsor of this bill, which has been the subject of several hearings as well as protracted committee discussions. Sentiment appears to be divided on the question of just what extent the tax on the several major tracks should be reduced. Under existing law the tax is $6,000 per day.

The Mullikin bill proposes to cut this to $500 a day, raise the tax on betting from 1 to 2½ per cent, and retain the present 15 per cent on the net receipts. The battle on the bill is being waged largely on the daily tax issue, suggestions of the reduction ranging generally between $1,000 and $4,000.

Amendment Expected.

That the bill will be amended in this particular before it comes from committee is certain. Effort was made to report the measure to the House on Friday, but the delegates apparently eager for adjournment and sensing a hard fight, it was determined to defer action. Now, the understanding is that the committee will be ready to report the bill probably tomorrow night, and certainly not later than Tuesday.

Legislative leaders plan to get this bill out of the way before tackling the sales and cigarette tax proposals, and other controversial measures. Meanwhile there is a large crop of local measures on the legislative files awaiting action, and it is expected that there will be a flood of new bills during the week.

Schmeling Pounds Helpless Hamas; Referee Halts Bout in 9th

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

Biloxi, Miss., March 10.

HE was tops among the big league shortstops in 1930, but he's rated a distinct third down here as they go to the post in the three-cornered battle for the job on the Washington Club. The name of Red Kress has figured about as importantly in the Nats' reconstruction as the name of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, and his future looms every bit as bright, according to the tenor of the articles that have emanated from this training camp.

KRESS.

Thus far, the only fellow who has come right out and declared flatly that Kress is shortstop timber is Kress himself. Manager Bucky Harris has intimated in a vague way that the shortstop job is open to any infielder who can win it, which is an old managerial custom. Then Bucky plunges into glowing tributes to the ability of Lyn Lary and Ossie Bluege, the No. 1 and No. 2 candidates. When pressed, Harris will admit that Kress is also in the running.

But, today, Kress allowed as how he didn't think he was boasting when he said he figured he could be the club's regular shortstop, Lary and Bluege notwithstanding. And when he began to rattle off the figures, there was eloquent testimony that it was not idle talk. The fellow was the hottest shortstop in the big leagues back in 1930.

That was the year that Connie Mack took cognizance of his .313 batting average with the St. Louis Browns and named Kress on his All-American team. Travis Jackson, of the Giants, was still in his prime, and Joe Cronin was reaching stardom with the Nats, but Mack chose Kress. Later, as if to place the final stamp of approval on the young shortstop of the Browns, the Sporting News, the ball players' Bible, accorded Kress the same honor.

THE Browns plucked him off the Berkeley, Calif., sandlots as a kid of 20 back in 1927, took him to spring training, sent him to Tulsa and called him back before the season ended. He hit over .300 in three of his first four years with St. Louis, leading the league with a .340 average until midseason of 1930.

Batting averages of .273, .305, .313 and .311 in his four years with the Browns established Kress as a star, what with his ability to go and get 'em in the field and his penchant for driving in runs. With the lowly St. Louis club, he drove in 117 runs in 1930, more than any player in the Nats' line-up could account for last season.

And then the first of a series of tough breaks caught up with him. The Browns came up with a star shortstop in Jimmy Levey. Manager Killefer asked Kress to move to third base. He was no star at that position, despite his .313 batting average in 1931, and when Killefer was presented with the opportunity to gain Pitcher Bump Hadley and Outfielder Bruce Campbell for Kress in a trade with the White Sox the deal was made.

With the White Sox, Kress was unable to return to his shortstop position. Bill Appling was starring at that post, and Manager Fonseca, needing a first baseman, shifted Kress to that bag. Kress played the position acceptably, but he never did recover from Fonseca's attempts to change his batting style. Despite his impressive averages, Fonseca attempted to make a right-field hitter out of the red head. It didn't work. The star of 1929, 1930 and 1931 batted only .275 in '32 and .248 in '33.

HE welcomed the trade that sent him to Washington in midseason last year in exchange for Bob Boken. But his was to be strictly a utility role, what with no less than Joe Cronin holding down the shortstop job with the Nats. And then, a few days before Cronin broke his wrist, Kress was unavailable for a chance to show his stuff at shortstop. While pitching to Heinie Manush in a practice game filmed for the baseball movie, "Batter Up," Kress suffered a broken thumb when he was hit by a line drive, and on August 28 he was sent home for the remainder of the season.

But he said today that his thumb now has healed, that Lyn Lary and Ossie Bluege were swell ball players, that Washington could win the pennant this season, and that he is a pretty good shortstop himself. All he wants is a fair shake by Bucky Harris and he says he's sure he'll get that.

He hasn't taken the matter up with Harris, he said, because he doesn't like to speak about such things except when spoken to. But when he signed his 1935 contract, he inclosed a letter to Clark Griffith, saying he wants a shot at the shortstop job. He's willing to let it go at that. At that, and whatever he can do out there on the ball field to prove his case.

Ex-Champion Outclasses U.S. Rival

Seconds Silent as Fans Ask Uneven Battle Be Stopped.

By the United Press.

Hamburg, Germany, March 10.—Max Schmeling today blasted his way to first place among contenders for the heavyweight title he once held by scoring a technical knockout over Steve Hamas in the ninth round of a scheduled 12-round bout.

Amid the roar of 25,000 who saw the American battered into a bleeding, helpless hulk, Joe Jacobs, American manager of the Black Uhlan, announced he had signed with Madison Square Garden for a Max Baer-Schmeling championship fight in June.

Schmeling, weighing 194¼ pounds, avenged one of the worst beatings of his career against Hamas and indicated that he might, on the form he showed, become the first heavyweight in history to regain his lost championship.

Towel Tossed In.

After a cautious first round, the German went to work on the 194¾-pound former Penn State football star, and ripped him with short, sharp smashes to the head and body until the ninth, when Al Thomas, Hamas' trainer, threw in the towel to bring the one-sided fight to an end.

At no time did Hamas display anything approaching the ability expected of a former conqueror of the German, and his efforts to fight back were blocked and countered with smashes that floored him three times in the sixth for counts of nine.

Unimpressive in training, though confident, Hamas appeared in poor condition. His gameness alone kept him going—always headed into the raking fire, which flattened him, draped him over the ropes in a daze and smashed him into a physical wreck.

At the end of the seventh round, with Hamas scarcely able to stand, the referee looked inquiringly toward Thomas and Charley Harvey, manager of the American, but they still held dwindling hope that Hamas might land one smashing blow and turn the tide.

They let him go through the terrible eighth, groping in the fog which clouded his brain, muttering to himself and obviously determined to finish on his fighting heart alone. Imminence of serious injury to him caused his handlers finally to heed the plea of the crowd, which howled from the sixth round on that it be stopped.

Jolted in First.

They boxed cautiously in the first round, but the beginning of the end for Hamas came just before the bell, when Schmeling landed a jolting right to the head.

After that Hamas never had a chance, did not win a single round, nor even land a telling punch, as Schmeling kept him back on his heels with powerful left hooks, straight rights and uppercuts which he landed at will.

Hamas made his best showing for one brief moment in the second round, when he leaped out and started to force the fighting. But Schmeling quickly dissuaded him with a series of short, sharp rights.

Through the third round Hamas missed repeatedly with wild, wide swings, and began to slow up under four right-hand smashes and a flurry of lefts.

Schmeling opened the fourth with two whistling rights which nearly upset Hamas, but did not keep up the attack in the fifth and won it

Golf Opponents Deadlocked; To Play Off

Smith and Runyan Rally to Square Match With Revolta, Picard.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, March 10.—Horton Smith and Paul Runyan today threw the final of the international four-ball golf tournament into a playoff as they came from behind on the last nine holes to finish at the thirty-sixth green all even with their opponents, Henry Picard and Johnny Revolta.

Winners of first prize in the $4,000 event will be decided in an 18-hole engagement tomorrow afternoon.

Runyan dropped his tee shot on the 177-yard twenty-ninth less than 3 feet from the pin and, shooting under pressure before a gallery estimated at 2,000 persons, calmly holed the putt.

Smith Adds Birdie.

After playing erratic golf for most of the round, Smith suddenly came to life on the thirty-first and ran in a 15-foot putt for a birdie 3 to leave his team 1 down.

On the long thirty-fourth the match was squared as Revolta, young Milwaukee player, watched a 3-foot putt bounce off the rim of the cup. Smith had sunk an 8-footer for a birdie 4.

The Chicagoan had a chance to win the match on the thirty-sixth as he surveyed an 8-foot putt for a birdie 4 after Picard and Revolta carded 5's. But the strain of four days of hard golf was too much and his try was inches short.

68 Is Best Score.

A stiff wind whipping the course sent scores hiking again. Picard and Revolta had a best best ball of 70 this afternoon after shooting a 68 in the morning for a 1-up advantage at lunch time. Two 69's adorned the Smith-Runyan card.

Picard and his partner appeared well on their way to becoming the giant killers of the twelfth annual four-ball as the turn was reached this afternoon.

Day before yesterday they knocked the top-seeded team of Bobby Cruickshank, of Richmond, Va., and Tommy Armour, of Chicago, out of the running. Today they were playing smoothly, well ahead of their opponents, the second seeded combination.

The break came on the tenth hole of the second round. With a 3½-foot putt for a birdie 3 and 4-up edge, Revolta could not find the cup.

Dizzy Is Likely To Hurl Cards' Debut Tuesday

By the Associated Press.

BRADENTON, Fla., March 10.—Dizzy Dean will be one of the pitchers in the St. Louis Cardinals' first exhibition game of the season Tuesday, Manager Frank Frisch announced.

Dizzy is expected to work about three innings against the Phillies. Terry Moore, who batted .328 last year at Columbus, where he was considered the best outfielder in the minor leagues, is likely to be in center field.

Dodger Regulars Win.

Orlando, Fla., March 10 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers staged their first intra-camp game of the training season today. The Regulars, presenting the same line-up that finished the 1934 season, with a few exceptions, defeated the Yannigans, 5 to 3.

Seven fielding errors by the Yannigans made the victory easy. Bob Logan and Les Munns twirled effectively for the varsity, while Rookie Frank Lamanske hurled impressively for the losers.

Diggs Is Seen As Regular With Nats

'Has Stuff,' Says Harris as Youngster Checks Club's Sluggers.

By Shirley L. Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

BILOXI, Miss., March 10.—Manager Bucky Harris ventured far out on the limb today with the prediction that young Reese Diggs, one year off the Baltimore sandlots, would be a regular member of the Washington pitching staff before the training trip ended.

Harris' liking for the work of Diggs was apparent from the outset of the club's workout here, but it has gradually intensified until today the Nat's manager became downright lavish in his praise of the good-looking, reed-like right hander from Pimlico, Md.

"He has the stuff," Harris said at the conclusion of Diggs' turn on the mound during hitting practice when the rookie served up a fast ball that the hitters were popping into the air for the most part, even Fred Sington, Cliff Bolton, Jake Powell and Sammy Holbrook, who have been lambasting all types of pitching thus far.

Compared to Rowe.

Harris compared Diggs' delivery to that of Schoolboy Rowe, who broke into the majors under the Nats' manager at Detroit. From the sidelines, Diggs' pitching is no more impressive than that of the raft of the other rookies in camp here, but up at the plate the hitters find difficulty in following the ball.

"He has a kind of sneak motion like Rowe's," said Harris. "When a hitter's standing up there at the plate he don't expect much from that side-arm delivery. He's got a hop on that fast one, too, and the way he gets it away, he figures to be ahead of the hitter. I have an idea he has control, too. Fellows with his delivery usually do."

Harris' pronouncement places Diggs in the forefront of the rookies struggling to fill the three positions on the Nats' pitching staff, which Harris has declared open.

Names Six Regulars.

Today Bucky named six pitchers as regulars—Whitehill, Weaver, Burke, Hadley, Linke and Russell. Regular jobs are awaiting any others who can make the grade. The veteran Al Thomas thus is in the fight with such as Diggs, Syd Cohen, Archie Scrivener, Leon Pettit, Frank Peticolas and Henry Coppola. Almost out of consideration are such as Dick Lanahan, Francis Mulcahey and Orville Armbrust.

Biloxi's rains abated today and this city as a training site regained its favor when the infield dried out miraculously and permitted hitting practice at home plate again.

Every rookie on the squad took a turn at pitching to the batters, while an epidemic of blistered hands broke out among the hitters. Suffering from soreness are Jake Powell, Catcher Sammy Holbrook and Third Baseman Joe Mills.

Redmond Pounds 'Em.

The booming base hits of Freddie Sington and Cliff Bolton again feature the hitting, but Bolton found competition from a new source when Jack Redmond, third-string catcher, began to pound the ball for lengthy wallops. Reviewing the hitting practice behind the batting cage, Harris was amazed at Redmond's slugging in view of his lean .212 average with Chattanooga last season.

Again today Shortstop Lyn Lary was popping 'em up in the hitting drill, but Harris accounted for his failure by citing the long motor drive from the Coast to Biloxi, declaring that Lary will soon find his batting eye and add a lot of power to the team's slugging.

Ossie Bluege is still the daddy of 'em all in the bunting drills. Today, Bluege came up with 32 straight grounders before missing as 200 Biloxi fans marveled.

Red Kress is the latest arrival in camp. He attended his first practice today and shed approximately 10 pounds as Trainer Mike Martin worked him relentlessly.

Outfielders Heinie Manush and Johnny Stone are now the only players A. W. O. L. except Holdout Walter Stewart. They are both signed, but were ordered to report today. Their arrival is expected hourly. The day's lone arrival was Outfielder Fred Schulte, who has been reading about the efforts of Jake Powell and Freddie Sing to win his job from him.

Big Ten's Season Ends in 3-Way Tie

Wisconsin, Illinois and Purdue Share Laurels.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 10.—A 1935 Western Conference basket ball campaign goes into the book with honors pretty well spread around—a three-way tie for the title, and even the last-place team, Chicago, sharing in the glory.

Purdue, which had the title all to itself last year, closed its season last night with a 38-to-24 victory over Northwestern to share team honors with Wisconsin and Illinois at nine victories and three defeats.

Fox, Harness Driver, Dies.

Carnera-Imp Bout Is Week's Feature

Canzoneri - Woods Battle Also in Spotlight.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 10.—The battle of those ponderous dreadnaughts—Primo Carnera and Ray Impellittiere—weighing more than a quarter of a ton between them, at Madison Square Garden next Friday night, and a return engagement at Chicago the same night between Tony Canzoneri and Chet Woods, lightweight rivals, top an otherwise colorless ring program this week.

The massive Impellittiere hopes his showing against the Italian will warrant him being placed in the group of Max Baer's challengers. Canzoneri, if he turns the tables on Woods, may be offered a chance at Lou Ambers, the Herkimer, N. Y., sensation, generally accepted as the principal challenger for Barney Ross' lightweight title.

Pros to Vie Today At Congressional

Mackenzie and Houghton Battle Is Forecast.

Congressional Country Club's course, which has long been considered a tough layout to break 70 in competitive golf, will attempt to withstand the threats of a group of District professionals today in an informal sweepstakes scheduled to start around 1 p. m.

It looks like a battle between Roland Mackenzie, the host pro, who has been under par in his last four rounds at Congressional, and Al Houghton, Kenwood's kingpin.

A lot of other pros will have something to say about first prize money. George Diffenbaugh, of Indian Spring; Al Treder, of Manor; Claggett Stevens, of Congressional; Danny Burton, of Army and Navy; Cliff Spencer, of Beaver Dam; Walter, Frank and Gillie Cunningham, of Burning Tree; Tony Sylvester, of Bannockburn, and Mel Shorey, of East Potomac, will be on the firing line.

Tribe Beats Pels, 7-5, In Exhibition Opener

New Orleans, March 10 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians defeated the New Orleans Pelicans, 7 to 5, today in the opening game of the spring exhibition season.

The Tribe's line-up included only two of last year's regulars. The Indians found three young Pelican hurlers for 11 hits. Bruce Campbell, the only seasoned major leaguer among the new Redskins, led the attack with three singles in as many times at bat.

League Franchise Goes to Asheville

Cardinals to Transfer Club From Greensboro.

By the Associated Press.

Asheville, N. C., March 10.—Local backers of a Piedmont League baseball club for Asheville announced today that the St. Louis Cardinals had definitely agreed to place their franchise, heretofore operated at Greensboro, in this city.

Oliver French, business manager at Greensboro for several years, will continue in that capacity here, Billy Southworth, former major leaguer, was mentioned as a likely manager for the club.

A meeting to draw up a schedule and attend to other routine was tentatively set for March 17 at Charlotte by Dan W. Hill, league president, after announcement that the St. Louis-Asheville deal had been closed.

Baer Offered $75,000 To Battle O'Mahoney

Baltimore, March 10 (AP).—Ed Contos, Baltimore wrestling promoter, revealed today he was trying to promote a mixed fight here between Max Baer, heavyweight boxing champion, and Daniel O'Mahoney, Irish wrestling champion.

Contos said he had wired Ancil Hoffman, Baer's manager, an offer of $75,000 with a privilege of 37½ per cent of the gross gate receipts for the bout. The match would permit Baer to box and O'Mahoney to wrestle.

Babe and Dizzy Shake Hands; 'No Hard Feelings,' They Say

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

TAMPA, Fla., March 10.—Baseball's two outstanding player personalities, Babe Ruth and Dizzy Dean, shook hands today, assured each other there were no "hard feelings" and agreed it was great to be fellow National Leaguers.

The occasion was the second game of the exhibition series between the Boston Braves and the Cincinnati Reds. It came unexpectedly, but the meeting overshadowed the fact that the Reds' rookie team pounded three of the Braves' first-string pitchers unmercifully and gained a lopsided victory, 12 to 1, to square accounts.

Dean, sharing a busman's holiday with other Cardinal stars by traveling 50 miles to see a ball game, fulfilled his promise to seek out Ruth at the earliest opportunity and remove any suspicion from the Babe's mind about what Dizzy thought of the great slugger's shift to the National League.

The conversation ran something like this:

"H'ya, Babe."

"H'ya, kid."

"Say, I'm glad to see you in a National League uniform, big fellow."

"Yeah, it's O. K."

"I hope you didn't think I said all those things they quoted me in the papers on."

"Naw, I didn't. There's no hard feeling."

"Well, they got me wrong in the papers."

"O. K., kid."

"Say, you know I only beat the Braves once the last two years. With you in there I probably won't beat this club at all this year."

"Well, I'll be in there swinging."

"Well, good luck, Babe."

"Good luck, kid."

Ruth, for the second straight day, played only 5⅓ innings. He failed to get a hit in three times at bat against two recruits from Toronto, Gene Schott and Al Hollingsworth, a southpaw.

The Babe grounded out once, fanned on a called third strike off Schott in the third and lifted a towering infield fly in his final turn. He had only one hit, a single, to show for his first seven times at bat but played an errorless game at first base both days.

With fewer "gate crashers" and free admissions, today's crowd was

A's Whip Giants In Exhibition, 5-3

Coleman's Triple Leads to Decisive Counters.

By the Associated Press.

Miami Beach, Fla., March 10.—The Philadelphia Athletics rallied after two straight defeats and whipped the New York Giants, 5 to 3, in an exhibition game today. Ed Coleman's triple off Allyn Stout, followed by singles by Charley English and Alex Hooks, produced the deciding runs.

The A's got to Carl Hubbell for three runs in the first on singles by Cramer, Moses, Higgins and English, a pass and an error by Jackson, but the star southpaw settled down in the next two frames and fanned five. Dick Bartell's home run with two aboard brought in the Giant tallies in the third.

Brooklyn Boss Pinning Hopes On Hurlers

(The first of a series, gathered first-hand in the South, on the training and prospects of the major league ball clubs for the coming season.)

By Edward J. Neil.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 10.—That intriguing combination of comedy and commander, Charles D. (Casey) Stengel, shepherd of the Brooklyn flock, has no illusions concerning the pace his charges are likely to set in the National League this season.

No one has called them any names so far, no one has insulted them, as did Bill Terry, in all innocence and to his lasting regret later, something over a year ago. Casey, who wanders about the training grounds in a yellow sweatshirt, "So they'll know I'm manager," dispensing wisdom and wisecracks with equal facility, must depend strictly on brute strength and his own resources—of which even he admits there is none too much available at the moment.

The Dodgers finished sixth last season, winding up by knocking the Giants out of the pennant in a final spectacular series at the polo grounds after winning more games than any other club but the World Champion Cardinals in the final month of play. Since then there have been no trades for the Dodgers,

Round-by-Round Description Of Schmeling-Hamas Contest

By the Associated Press.

FIRST ROUND.

They started slow. Both fighters were cautious during the first minute of sparring until Hamas threw in a pair of good lefts. Schmeling came back and put the American against the ropes with a series of stiff rights, then roughed Hamas about the ring with a fusillade to the body.

SECOND ROUND.

Schmeling appeared determined to get the fight over. He piled into Hamas and rode him about the ring, gumming in a dozen good punches, short ones, with scarcely a return. Hamas stayed strictly on the defensive. Schmeling landed three more terrific rights before Hamas could fall into a clinch. At the close of the round Hamas went unsteadily to his corner.

THIRD ROUND.

Max poured a series of hard rights about the body, then cracked Hamas in the jaw and put him against the ropes for a terrific beating. Hamas looked outclassed. He was swinging wildly, missing with both hands, while Max coolly moved in and measured him with short jolting blows to the body. Hamas, with a welt under his eye, looked bad in his corner.

FOURTH ROUND.

Hamas got in a flurry of punches at the start but was stopped short by one of Schmeling's crushing rights. They stood in the center of the ring and threw punches for 10 seconds before Hamas broke ground again and retreated against the ropes with Max following steadily and punishing him. Two of Max's rights to the jaw staggered Hamas at the bell but it was Hamas' best round so far.

FIFTH ROUND.

SIXTH ROUND.

Hamas looked some better. He got in a brace of rights to the body. Then Schmeling put Hamas down in the American's corner for a nine count. He forced him against the ropes and sent him down for another nine. Hamas was taking awful punishment. He took the third full count of nine, and Schmeling was standing pouring them into him when the bell saved Hamas.

SEVENTH ROUND.

Hamas, clearly out on his feet, staggered to the center of the ring and swung feebly, but Schmeling battered him about unmercifully. The crowd went wild. Hamas' upper lip was swelled to almost twice normal. He looked a wreck but gamely weathered Max' crushing rights and lefts. Near the end of the round Hamas sagged weakly against the ropes and took a terrific beating as the crowd yelled to stop the fight.

EIGHTH ROUND.

Schmeling clipped him regularly on the chin without a return. Hamas bled furiously and looked pitiful as ringsiders yelled for his seconds to throw in the towel. During the last minute of the round Hamas took one of the worst beatings in heavyweight history, but the referee stubbornly refused to stop the slaughter.

NINTH ROUND.

The brutal punishment continued, but Schmeling apparently had lost some of his steam after previous efforts and could not put Steve down. Schmeling had Steve on the ropes, pouring them in, when, finally, the referee stepped between them and stopped the fight after about a minute.

Gallico Calls Harvey Failure as Manager: 1. Took Hamas Abroad; 2. Didn't Stop Fight

By Paul Gallico

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, March 10.—They counted nine three times over Steve Hamas in my study late this morning. I listened, quite fascinated, with my ear glued to the speaker of my short wave radio set. Shortly afterward the announcer explained an enormous shout that came shattering across the Atlantic Ocean by saying that the referee had stopped the fight in the ninth round and awarded the fight to Max Schmeling on a technical knockout.

Thereupon came to its more or less logical conclusion the mutton-headed argosy of Prizefight Manager Charley Harvey. It becomes thus reasonably simple to second guess that Charley Harvey is not a good prizefight manager.

A good prizefight manager does not take a real heavyweight championship contender all the way to Hamburg, Germany, to get him knocked out by a man he had already soundly whipped, and for a paltry $25,000. No, Mr. Harvey is labelled as a failure as a manager, and for the second time in his career as a cruel and heartless second.

For not only the broadcast but the stories from abroad indicate that with his man helpless and taking a cruel and terrible beating, Harvey permitted him to continue long after mercy and decency indicated that he should surrender his pretensions. For three rounds the crowd was calling for the fight to be stopped and for two the referee kept looking to Harvey's corner while Hamas was striken, bleeding and unable either to attack or to defend himself.

Years ago I wrote a piece like this suggesting that beneath Harvey's mild and gentle appearance of a sweet and kindly old gentleman lay greed and cruelty and for this I was well scolded by friends who were ready to swear that Harvey had nothing but sweetness, kindness and sympathy in his nature. The occasion of my first piece was the beating that Harvey permitted Tom Heeney to take from Gene Tunney in Tunney's last defense of his title.

In the last rounds of their fight poor Heeney was blinded, groggy, beaten to a jelly, unable to defend himself, and certainly unable even to lay a glove on the champion. Harvey couldn't find it in his heart to say "enough" for his boy and spare him those last smashing

Next Sunday's Game.

DISPLAYING their best team-work of the season, Sun Radio yesterday swept—or rather waded and skidded—through the Italian A. C. soccer team, 4 to 0, to capture the championship of the Recreation League. In the opening round of the consolation competition, Miller Furniture beat Occoquan, 2-1, and Sherwood upset Virginia Avenue, 2-0.

From the outset, the title game was fast and exciting, in spite of rain which started to fall as the game began.

After 15 minutes play, Harding sent across a perfect counter which bounced off DiValentin's head, rose high into the air and dropped in front of the Italian goal and drifted into the net.

Scores Second Goal.

Ten minutes before the interval, W. Simonds sent a shot past G. Vecchietti for Sun's second goal and the last of the half.

Increasing rain had made the field very slippery, and the players had difficulty keeping their footing. However, the Sun team resumed play strongly, only the alertness of the Italian goalkeeper preventing more Radio goals.

Led by Minni, Sun's outstanding player, the forwards passed and repassed effectively, and a cross by Harding from near the line was converted into a goal by "Buddy" Simonds, who headed through. Another series of attacks by the Italians followed without bringing any points, Hook clearing and starting his forwards off again. The ball bobbed up and down in front of the Italian goal, where finally Kaplan got it and scored Sun's fourth and final goal.

In the closing minutes Hook missed scoring from a penalty kick.

Bruzzese Losers' Star.

The Italian eleven failed to show any sustained combination, and, with the sole exception of Bruzzese, were outclassed on speed by their opponents.

Santa Anita Track Makes $3,000,000

More Than $15,000,000 Is Bet at 65-Day Meeting.

By the United Press.

Los Angeles, March 10.—California's first major league horse track adventure in 25 years—Santa Anita Park—closed books tonight after 65 days of operation, with friendly feelings all around.

The Los Angeles Jockey Club, which ran the show, is happy because it exhibited some very fine ponies and collected upward of $3,000,000 from the natives, as southern California's contribution to improvement of the breed.

Your southern California citizen, who was allowed to pay $15,896,365 through the pari-mutuel wagering windows, is happy because he takes great joy contributing to worthy causes; and the State of California is happy because its cut, in return for its legal benediction of the horse track business, was 4 per cent of the gross betting, or $635,854.60.

'ession Fails to Revive South Atlantic League

Savannah, Ga., March 10 (AP).—Representatives of four cities, Augusta, Macon, Jacksonville and Savannah, met here today to discuss plans for revival of the South Atlantic Baseball League, but the meeting adjourned with the future of the league still in doubt.

One bar to progress was the fact that representatives of three other cities mentioned as probable starters in the league did not attend the meeting. These were Greenville, Columbia and Spartanburg, S. C., and it was not known here whether plans for league clubs in those cities had failed or not.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Tropical Park, March 10.

The racing scene has shifted over to Bill Dwyer's cozy track over at Coral Gables by the Miami-Biltmore Hotel and this is the last stop for Bennings, Inc., before the Bowie meeting opens April 2. If you get a chance to visit this track stop by Lost Lake someday. Lost Lake is just a stone's throw from the race track and is one of the most interesting spots in America. Here is the only flock of trained wild ducks in the world. They do a variety of tricks. The lake, a sunken body of water, is a sea of colors. In addition, every known tropical plant is growing in the surrounding park. Many were imported from India and China. Well, Mantagna didn't win the Florida Derby but he did the next best thing, finishing second. At that, he paid a lot more to place than Black Helen did to win. And don't ask, "So what?" This race course should make a lot of money. Its mutuel play should rival that of Hialeah and its expenses are not half as great. Tropical has a sort of Bowie atmosphere. If you know what I mean.

BILL.

First race—Flopsie proved a flop the last time we tried to make her run. She is in a better spot here and I see no reason for mistakes. Festoon looks as the one to beat in this field of maiden fillies. Rustic Lassie, a cheap one, might go well on an off track.

Second race — Feudal Lord has been whispered around as a good thing. Porter will ride and he may turn on the heat long enough to outlast Cathop and Broadsword the ones destined to draw the bulk of the mutuel play.

Third race—Jakovis has been running himself into condition and has more than a fighting chance of reaching the judges first at a good price. I'm depending on Arcaro for a good ride. M. J. Brennan may prove troublesome and the same goes for Happy Find, a recent winner.

Fourth race—I understand that the lightly-weighted Goldfin is ready to do some real running under Don Meade. Worth taking a chance on this fellow today. Now that Fair Countess has a victory under her belt we can expect even better things. Must be respected in this field. Jack Chevigny for the show.

Fifth race—I'm not satisfied that Sabula can't defeat this kind so I'm going back for this mile. Of course, Mantagna's race yesterday stamps him as the one to beat but I'm told he will be scratched. King Saxon carries a load of lead in his saddle pockets.

Sixth race—Dean Swift, with the rail position and only steadying weight, might break on top and make chasers out of the rest of this field. Civil War is always dangerous as that recent effort shows. Fast Stride to take care of the others. Hank McTavish, last on the list, might be a factor but there's slim chance that he will see action.

Campbell Deaf To Pleas to Give Up

By the United Press.

DAYTONA Beach, Fla., March 10.—Sir Malcolm Campbell today turned a deaf ear to cabled requests from English friends that he be satisfied with his new world's land speed record of 276.816 miles an hour and abandon plans for further runs.

Among the cabled requests was one from Lord Rothmere, and his son, Esmond Harmsworth. It read: "Bearing in mind your splendid achievement for Britain and British motoring in establishing further worlds record in Bluebird and calamitous risks you would be taking by further efforts, we entreat you to rest on your laurels. Britain can not afford to lose so gallant a sportsman."

Campbell's answer was a flat refusal. "I deeply appreciate your very kind message," he cabled back, "but I have set myself a task which, due to the difficulties we have encountered, I have not yet been able to accomplish and which will never be fulfilled unless we continue trying. I fully realize the risks involved, but if only conditions get better I am anxious that my great car be given an opportunity of proving her capabilities, which up till now she has not been able to do. I can assure you I will take no further unnecessary risks and that I will not make any more attempts unless beach and weather conditions improve. I propose staying here a further ten days hoping that the tide will turn."

Goal of His Life.

Sir Malcolm's answer to Lord Rothmere explains more clearly than anything he has said before just how he feels toward driving Bluebird at a speed of 300 miles an hour. It is his goal in life, and has been for years and years. His eyes are fastened, his heart set on moving a mile across the earth in 12 seconds flat, and until he does Bluebird never will be permanently housed.

Sharing his dream is Lady Campbell. Despite the tortures she suffers on the days Sir Malcolm sends Bluebird down the sands, she does not want him to quit until his goal is achieved.

"It means Malcolm's happiness, that 300," she said today, "and I would be the last one to ask him to quit. I know the hazards, yes, but think of the joy the day he reaches it."

The perfect beach Campbell is waiting for may not be many hours away, for tonight a mighty sea was running, pounding the course from the inlet to the curve.

smaller than yesterday's, totaling about 2,000, but the paid attendance was greater, 1,800, as compared to 1,700 Saturday. The Braves' share for the two games amounted to $1,000.

The managers of the two 1934 pennant clubs, Frankie Frisch, of the Cards, and Mickey Cochrane, of the Tigers, were in the crowd that saw the Reds plaster Fred Frankhouse, Flint Rhem and Walter (Huck) Betts for 21 hits in eight innings. With only one player of any real major league experience in the line-up—Sammy Byrd, a former Yankee—the Reds scored in all but the second inning. Goodman, right fielder, and Johnny Mize, first sacker, each with three hits and Catcher Henry Erickson, with four singles, led the attack. Lincoln Blaklet, left fielder, got a homer inside the grounds, with two on, to cap the climax in the eighth.

The Braves, having trouble with "bad hops" made six errors and were lucky to escape a shutout, getting their only run on a wild throw by Shortstop Billy Myers. Les Mallon, with a single and double, got two of the Braves' five hits.

FIRST RAC

Understein's Late Basket Margin

By Dave Herman.

LAST year Jake Understein was just another 145-pound amateur basket ball player. Yesterday the black-haired, skinny lad with the educated swivel hips and dthe courage of a jungle cat, was the toast of the Rinaldi Tailors professional team.

Jake emerged apparently from nowhere in the last minute of the game with Heurich Brewers at the Heurich gym, and from mid-court tossed in the field goal that enabled Rinaldi to win by 38-37, and put in an indisputable claim to the District professional championship.

Understein's looping circus throw, which didn't even touch the backboard, so deadly was his aim, came as the climax of one of the roughest and most exciting contests of the season. It was lucky that Jake was the Tailors' ace in the hole, for a few seconds after he sent the ball swishing through the hoops for the precious 2 points, Bucky Buscher scored a foul goal that otherwise would have given Heurich the game.

Starts Out As Rout.

It was one of those blood-tingling battles you read about. It started out as a rout, and wound up as a thriller, and the team, which should have won, according to the book, didn't.

Turn loose a pack of wolves on the Heurich court, and you get some idea of how the going was. For during those 40 minutes of playing no less than 43 fouls were committed, 25 being charged against the Brewers. In the first half 26 personals were called. Heurich cashed in on 13. Rinaldi made 6.

Ed Ronkin, a curly-haired will-o'-the wisp, who helped University of Maryland attain basket ball glory a few years ago, carried off individual scoring honors. Ed rolled up 17 points, 15 of which were scored in the first half. A human dynamo who catapulted the ball into the basket every time he fired, Ronkin was unbeatable for the first 20 minutes, when it was all Rinaldi. Together with Jackie Goldblatt, the former Tech High star, he staked the Tailors to an early 8-2 lead, which grew to the alarming proportions of 14-2 with ten minutes of the game gone. There was no stopping of Ronkin as he scored seven field goals, and Rinaldi entered the second half ahead 27-14.

Tailors Guard Well.

Expert guarding such as fans haven't seen all season was displayed by the Tailors. They held the Brewers without a field goal for the first 15 minutes of play, and it was Bucky Buscher who broke the ice. As a matter of fact, Heurich could tally but three field goals in the first half.

Heurich came to life in the closing session. After little Joe Sweeny made it 29-14, Ev Russell, Red Roberts and Bucky Buscher opened up with their vaunted passing and shooting attack, and the Brewers pulled up to 29-20 after five minutes had elapsed. Buscher was successful in three cracks at the hoops, and with ten minutes to go Rinaldi led 32-26. Five minutes later it was 33-30, and with two minutes left, 35-34, in favor of Rinaldi.

Here Joe Croson made a goal, and Heurich had tied the count after 39 minutes of play.

Moon Evans Fails.

The door was open for Moon Evans, of Heurich, to prove the hero. He dribbled under his basket unmolested at this juncture, but the ball teetered on the brink and—went the other way.

Enter Jake Understein. Credit Buscher with a free throw. Credit Jake Goldblatt with doing his own freezing by throwing the ball deliberately down the other end of the court three times to kill time. This probably saved the day for Rinaldi.

In the preliminaries, Olmsted Grill defeated Heurich Flashes, 36-30, and St. Mary's Celtics toppled Fort Monroe, 42-31.

BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION and Company F, of Hyattsville, two of the favored unlimited teams, so bracketed in the draw that there is a possibility that both will be in the semifinals, will make their bow tonight in the District A. A. U. basket ball tournament under the sponsorship of The Washington Post at Tech High's gym.

The Sleuths, boasting eight former stars, will meet Fort Humphreys, one of the best of the Soldier teams in this section, at 9:30, while Company F, its line-up dotted with college talent, will take the floor at 8:30 against the McLean A. C., whose indifferent season makes it the underdog.

Takoma Boys Club and Althiso tangle in a 145-pound encounter with the former boasting one of the high point stars of the District in Jack Randall, who has scored 30 points in three different games this year. This contest will open the program at 7:30.

Tonight's games will mark the second week of the big championship, which is expected to reach the semifinal stage next week.

Has Powerful Team.

Bureau of Investigation, which a few nights ago was nosed out in an extra period battle for the Community Center title by Sholl's, heavy favorites in this year's event, will present a powerful aggregation, with every man a star. Walter Morris, team captain, is a former Georgetown great, and Joe Lynch, center, is one of Mount St. Mary's immortals. Carl MacCartee was a luminary at St. John's and Forrest Burgess gained fame at American University and George Washington. Three former Duke stars, Jim and Herbie Thompson and Nelson Colley, also will be in the Sleuths' line-up, as will Downey Rice, a one-time Central High star.

Company F, too, is blessed with good material. Spider Chase, center, and Rufus Vincent, forward, are former University of Maryland letter men—and all-around players, too. Fenton and Harry Cogar, Warren Kidwell, Fred Thomas and Sam Crosthwait are other Hyattsville players who know a good bit about handling the leather.

McLean A. C. will offer two sets of brothers, Julian and Wade Hansborough and Arthur and George Kerns.

Games Tomorrow.

Tomorrow night Northeast Boys Club and St. Martin's clash in the 145-pound class; Acacia meets Jewish Community Center, and Mount Vernon tackles Rinaldi Tailors, both unlimited games.

Nineteen games were played in last week's games, which witnessed the advance to the second round of the following:

115-pound class—Cavaliers, Washington Boys Club, Takoma Boys Club, Y. M. C. A.

Sterling performances were turned in by Sholl's, Olmsted Grill and Stewart's Pharmacy.

6,000 Will See College Park Twin Bill

Maryland Faces Catholic U. Boxers, G. U. Quintet in Tests Tonight.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

THE fighting Irish—Irish only in the moss-covered traditions of their respective institutions—Georgetown and Catholic University, march on College Park en masse tonight to meet Maryland's huskies in basket ball and boxing in a program that marks the dawn of a new era in local intercollegiate sports.

Georgetown pits its basket ball skill against the Terrapins at 8 o'clock in the upper-half of the twin-bill, and Catholic University's boxing brigade will trade punches with the undefeated Maryland squad in the finale. A throng of approximately 6,000 fans, the largest ever squeezed into Ritchie Coliseum, is expected to view the proceedings

Aside from the spirited rivalry between the schools, reborn on the gridiron last season, the basket ball game has little to recommend it. Both teams have struggled through miserable seasons—the most disastrous in a decade. But it will be a hard fought battle, with Maryland's zone defense opposed to Georgetown's somewhat dimmed scoring eye and man for man style. On paper it is virtually a toss-up, with a slim edge for Georgetown.

Boxing Is Magnet.

Boxing is the magnet that will attract the majority of fans. Maryland has the greatest combination of mittenpushers in its history and Catholic's is just a shade behind other potent squads molded by the capable fingers of Coach Eddie La Fond.

Maryland will go into action on the long end of the odds, despite the absence of Ivan Nedomatsky, 135-pound Southern Conference champion, and Lyman McAboy, ace 165-pounder, who are out with broken hands. The Terps appear to be too finely balanced for Catholic U., which was weakened by the loss of Freddy Mix, 145 pounds, and Fred Rydewski, heavyweight, both barred because of the freshman rule.

But the home team has another champion to carry on in the person of "Stew" McCaw, light-heavyweight king. If Coach Jack Harmony decides to use him in this class the Cards have an ace to match him, Red Fleming, the tall knockout artist who is undefeated this season.

Gormley May Fight.

Last night McCaw seemed certain of being shoved back into the 165-pound class, giving way to Johnny Gormley, a tough youngster with dynamite in both fists. In this event, Johnny Birkland will draw the heavyweight assignment, meeting willing but inexperienced Red Orth.

On paper Catholic U. can hope for only a draw at best. The realization of this ambition hinges on the first bout of the card, between Ruben Miro, of C. U., and Jimmy Young. A Miro win would place the Cards in position to tie, but any other verdict will completely shatter such hopes.

Capt. Eddie Thibideau figures to win the 135-pound bout for Catholic, Angy Restaino should score at 125-pounds, and Fleming looks good for a badly needed point in the 175-pound engagement. But a C. U. victory in any other bout, aside from the 115-pounder, would be a distinct upset.

Maryland.	Weight.	Catholic U.
Jim Young	115	Ruben Miro
Bill Waller or J. Birmingham	125	Angy Restaino
Dick Babcock	135	Ed Thibideau
Walter Webb	145	Carmen LaSalle
Mike Lombardo	155	Tom Oliver
Stewart McCaw	165	Pete Dranginis
Johnny Gormley	175	Red Fleming
Johnny Birkland	Heavy	George Oth

Hamas Beaten By Schmeling At Hamburg

He got his chance in the sixth, when he pummeled Hamas at will, bowled him over three times for counts of nine and sought vainly to keep the American down.

At the beginning of the seventh the crowd began to laugh at Hamas' futile swings and roared for the fight to be stopped, while Hamas stumbled around the ring a helpless target for the German's barrage, which he continued through the eighth, smashing Hamas' nose, and into the ninth, when the bloody towel fluttered from the corner.

Schmeling received only one mark, a small red spot over one eye, in contrast to his battered opponent.

After the fight the German said he was ready to box Baer any time for the championship, and talked excitedly of the bout in June, scheduled for Madison Square Garden's Long Island bowl.

Surrounded by admirers, Schmeling went to the hotel room with Jacobs to call his wife Annie Ondra, the German actress, and assure her he was all right.

"I guess I need a shave," Schmeling said and sought a barber, while Jacobs told of plans for Schmeling's attempt to regain the championship.

4 Shirts a Record In Pro Court Game

Croson engaged in a shirt-pulling contest with Jack Scully, former Niagara College star who played center for Rinaldi Tailors, and the former Duke player got the worst of the deal. It all came about when both players tried to rough things up in the championship game.

Five minutes after the game started, Scully broke the strap on the left side of Croson's shirt. Ten minutes later he broke the other side. Before the half ended Croson had to make two additional trips to the locker room to change shirts, and the fourth time the supply of white shirts was exhausted. Croson was forced to use a red Heurich Flashes' shirt.

The Rinaldi Tailors have agreed to sew up the three shirts.

Max to Oppose Baer in June, Is Report

Title Bout at Garden Is 'All Set,' Asserts Joe Jacobs.

By the United Press.

HAMBURG, Germany, March 10. Joe Jacobs waited until after Max Schmeling had scored his nine-round technical knockout over Steve Hamas, then announced definitely to the United Press that Schmeling would meet Max Baer for the title in June.

"It's all set," said the German's American manager. "Madison Squre Garden officials agreed before I left that if Schmeling could score a decisive victory, he would be the logical choice for a chance to regain his championship."

Jacobs said he knew when Schmeling knocked out Walter Neusel a few months ago that his charge was far from through. He said Schmeling is free of the worries and out of the slump which allowed Hamas to beat him a year ago at Philadelphia and could "whip Max Baer or any man in the world now."

Real Schmeling.

"That was the real Schmeling in there against Hamas," Jacobs said.

He could not second Schmeling because he does not hold a license in Germany. He sat in a neutral corner through the fight, chewing on a long black cigar.

Schmeling was happy over his victory and because his wife was congratulated over the phone from Munich by Hitler. Hitler held tickets for the fight, but did not attend. Promoter Walter Rothenburg prohibited smoking on his account.

German Unmarked.

"Baer? I'll fight him any time now," Schmeling said, drinking soda water, and pointing out that he was unmarked but needed a shave.

In the disconsolate Hamas' camp, Manager Charlie Harvey said:

"We have no excuses. Hamas was only 50 per cent of his real self today. I didn't throw in the towel sooner because Hamas wouldn't let me."

Harvey said the fight went on over his protest because he was not permitted to use tape on Hamas' hands.

Griffith Calls Upon U. S. Army To Treat Earl Whitehill's Arm

By a Staff Correspondent.

BILOXI, Miss., March 10.—Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Club, today called upon the United States Army to assist him with his pitching problems.

Increasingly alarmed at the failure of Earl Whitehill's sore arm to respond to treatment, Griffith today arranged with the United States Soldiers Home here to treat his star southpaw pitcher tomorrow.

At the elaborately equipped Soldiers Home, Whitehill will undergo a diatherma treatment for his pitching arm, a form of internal heat, which Army physicians have prescribed.

Whitehill first reported soreness in his arm three days ago. It is attributed to overwork in practice, but Trainer Martin's conventional treatments have failed to alleviate the soreness which has been diagnosed as a combined muscular and cold ailment.

Tomorrow, after a brief workout on the pitching mound, Whitehill will be rushed to the Soldiers Home clinic, where the treatment will be applied while he is still perspiring, as advised by Army physicians.

Manager Bucky Harris today attempted to calm the fears of Owner Griffith and Trainer Mike Martin by recalling that Whitehill suffered similar arm trouble in the spring of past seasons while with the Detroit Club, but in two previous seasons at Biloxi the southpaw always has been the first Washington pitcher to round into shape.

Proselyting Hit After Parley On Coast

Kleinsmid, Wilbur, Sproul Urge Cooperation in Fighting Problem.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 10.—Presidents of three California universities warned today that collegiate proselyting will not be tolerated in their schools and pleaded for the co-operation of the faculties, students and alumni "if this difficult problem is to be handled."

A conference between Rufus B. von Kleinsmid, of Southern California; Ray Lyman Wilbur, of Stanford, and Robert G. Sproul, of the University of California, resulted in the issuance of a joint statement containing such significant paragraphs as:

"We are conscious of the increasing complaints regarding the methods used in the solicitation of athletes for Pacific Coast institution, including those we represent. If this difficult problem is to be handled, it must come through the co-operative action of the faculties, students and alumni of all of the institutions.

Won't Pay Athletes.

"As a practical matter we will have no one connected with the paid staff of the university whose business it is to solicit athletes, or who thinks that is his business. Under no circumstances shall funds of the university, derived from athletics or otherwise, be used for paying expenses of high school or junior college students in association with athletic contests.

"There is no fundamental objection to assisting students who engage in athletics through scholarships, provided other students are given the same opportunities and those athletes obtaining scholarships are dealt with exactly as are other students. Whatever is done in connection with the support of students entering athletics should be done in the open and become a part of the public records of the institution which they attend."

Recognizing that "interested alumni and friends of the university will endeavor to persuade prospective athletes to attend the institution of their choice," the statement expressed the hope of the co-signers "that whatever is done in this connection will be done frankly and openly and along lines agreed upon by representative alumni of the different institutions."

Issue Warning.

The faculty heads agreed that while "in general the athletic relations of the universities are on a wholesome basis, there are certain tendencies developing which, unless checked, might lead to unfortunate and unnecessary conditions.

"There has been undue roughness in certain Coast games both in football and basket ball. We favor the most rigid and persistent vigilance and action on the part of all officials in penalizing rough play."

The statement complimented the conduct in general of spectators at intercollegiate contests and in concluding said: "Our hope and aim is to keep relations in our State upon such a basis the public will have the fullest confidence in everything we are doing."

The Martinsburg team was organized on an independent and semipro basis, having passed up affiliation for the season with organized ball this year.

Breed Award Goes To 10-Variety Dog

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, March 10.—For a prize-winning dog, Intruder makes a sorry looking champion, as pure-bred champions go.

Yet he was awarded a first place at the nineteenth annual show of the Western Reserve Kennel Club.

One of the contests in the show was to discover the dog with the greatest mixture of breeds in his make-up. The judges gave first position to Intruder when they found signs that he was related to the wire-haired terrier, Boston bull, Scottish terrier, West Highland white, Cairn terrier, Sealyham, poodle, spitz, Chihuahua and pug.

10 New Marks Recorded at Chapel Hill

Williamson Broke Two to Become First Athlete to Perform Feat.

By the Associated Press.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., March 10. Ten new records, two of them marked up by the brilliant University of North Carolina distance runner, Harry Williamson, today were on the books of the Southern Conference indoor games as a result of the sixth annual competition last night which the Tarheels won for the second straight year.

A check by official scorers today gave North Carolina a total of 45½ points, instead of 44½ as credited last night, as scorers only gave the Tarheels 1 point in the mile relay, with only three teams competing, when they really earned 2 points.

There was no other change in the standing, leaving Duke in second place, Maryland in third and Virginia in fourth.

375 Boys Take Part.

In the 26 events run in four divisions close to 375 athletes of 43 teams took part and Coach R. A. (Bob) Fetzer of the University of North Carolina, who has fathered the six annual indoor track and field competitions, termed the games "by far the most successful we've ever held."

"And, I'll tell you something else," he said. "If everything goes according to plans our runners in this meet next year will run on a nice, banked, wood track instead of on this flat floor." That will be welcome news to tracksters if it comes true.

As it was, the University's big Tin Can had been transformed into an excellent track and field ground, and some 2,500 fans crowded in to watch the exhibitions.

Old Records Erased.

With the marking up of new records in the broad jump and 2-mile events, only two record-holders listed on the conference sheet attended schools formerly in this circuit but now in the Southeastern. Charlie Hubbard, of North Carolina, broad-jumped 23 feet 8¼ inches to erase the name of Wens, of Georgia, from the list and Dick Dunaj, of Washington and Lee stepped the 2 miles in 9 minutes 44.8 seconds, to cut nearly 13 seconds off the old mark of Young, of Georgia.

Still being especially aimed at in the annual competition will remain the shotput mark of 46 feet ½ inch set by Coleman, of Auburn and pole vault record of 13 feet 3 inches by Zimmerman, of Tulane, set in 1931 and 1932, respectively.

Tech High Winner.

As a result of last night's competition, new champions were crowned in the three divisions other than the conference section. McKinley High, of Washington, D. C., succeeded Boys High, of Atlanta, in the scholastic division, Georgetown displaced Catholic University, which did not enter, in the nonconference division.

Williamson is the only competitor ever to break two records in one night in the six years the meet has been held. He set a time of 4 minutes 20 seconds for the mile, and two minutes and nine-tenths of a second in the half mile. Last year Grover Everett, of Virginia, broke the 70-yard high hurdle record and equaled the low barrier record.

Harvey Rapped By Gallico as Failure

Now, I never maintained that mercy was a quality that welled up in uncontrollable streams from the hearts of prize-fight managers, but, then, Harvey was always supposed to be different, a gentleman of the old school and all that sort of piffle. The older one grows, the more one must fasten to the conclusion—all prize fighters are alike, and so are prize-fight managers.

What was Harvey hoping for, those last terrible rounds in Hamburg? It was all Schmeling. The broadcaster, his voice quivering with excitement across the void, told us that Hamas was swaying, staggering and helpless, that he stood against the ropes, his face covered with blood, his features smashed, unable to defend and certainly unable to throw a punch that would have any chance of stemming the tide, or winning the fight, much less to go the distance.

The referee, a Belgian who surely must have had little love for the German, signaled to Harvey long before the ninth round to see whether he wanted it stopped. Harvey didn't.

Too, the reports that Hamas was in poor condition for the fight must have been true from the accounts of his behavior in the ring. Only a sucker fails to prepare thoroughly for a fight even if he has whipped the opponent before. Harvey's amazing failure in Europe is all the more astonishing when one considers that a chance for the heavyweight championship of the world hinged upon it.

His two recent knockout victories over two tough, young, second-class heavyweights make Schmeling immediately outstanding as the challenger for Max Baer.

Income Tax.

THE time has come, oh, fellowmen, to figure income tax again, and other troubles seem too frail to make the earnest voter quail. The blank they send me I must fill, although it is beyond my skill; 'twould take a civil engineer to answer all its questions queer, and he would not be civil long, when finding all his answers wrong . . . I still might be serene and gay, if all I had to do was pay, but when I face that income blank framed up by some topheavy crank, who makes his queries sound like Greek and every figure seem a freak, the light goes out, the darkness falls, there's desolation in my halls. Year after year they sent it back, they said I'd missed a lot of jack; I'd missed some earnings here and there, and skipped some bonds in my despair. With mien severe they told me then the whole thing must be done again, and that is why the town police insist that I disturbed the peace. The village banker said, said he, "Just bring the tinhorn blank to me, and I will fix it up, by jings, because I understand such things. I've handled figures all my life, I've figured for myself and wife, for all the merchants in the town, for Smith and Robinson and Brown. It is quite easy when you're trained," the kindly banker man explained. With gratitude I took the blank where he might see it at the bank. He figured for a little while, then pushed it to me with a smile. I thought how wonderful it was that he could do without a pause a trick that made me sweat all night, and then I couldn't get it right. Alas, alas, my fellowmen, the blamed old blank came back again.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

WITH the incentive of an all-expense-paid trip to the National Convention of the National Federation of Federal Employes at Yellowstone Park this summer, the Washington membership of the NFFE will launch an intensive three-months' drive April 1 for new members.

BAKER.

With restoration of full pay effective at the start of the campaign, the drive is regarded by NFFE officials as timely. Federal employe interest is centered on this and other salient points of the legislative program of the NFFE and the allied National Legislative Council of Federal Employe Organizations.

Prospects of restored annual leave, cumulative sick leave, liberalized retirement and extension of classification enhanced by House Civil Service Committee Chairman Ramspeck's outline of the program he has submitted to his committee, make the outlook of Government workers for the next several months rightfully optimistic.

Miss Matilda Lindsay, national organizer, by appointment of J. W. Ginder, president of the D. C. Federation, will direct the membership drive. During the campaign each unit will stage community meetings, department rallies, dances, card parties and other events at which Federal employes may gather and learn of what is being done for them on Capitol Hill and through the departments.

A headquarters and information center already has been set up in suite 604, 710 Fourteenth street northwest.

Samuel B. Detwiler, jr. (P), Fire Resistance Section, Bureau of Standards, is production manager of the Troubadours, musical comedy organization at George Washington University. This group will present its annual show at Roosevelt High School Auditorium March 28, 29 and 30. The title is "Bride of the Incas," With Mr. Detwiler as co-author.

INTERIOR Department and other Government employes are invited to hear Robert Alcorn, chairman of the Joint Conference on Retirement, explain retirement legislation now pending in Congress, at 4:30 p. m. today in the Interior auditorium.

The meeting is sponsored by General Land Office Lodge No. 153, American Federation of Government Employes. The regular March meeting of this lodge will be held at 4:30 p. m. tomorrow, with the retirement legislation involved as the chief item on the program.

Elton C. Hotchkiss, of the staff of the Upper Mississippi Wild Life and Fish Refuge, Winona, Minn., has been detailed to the Washington office of Biological Survey for several months.

Representative William I. Sirovich (above) will be the principal speaker at a mass meeting of Federal workers at 8 p. m. today in the new Labor Department Auditorium, explaining legislation now before Congress affecting Federal personnel. The meeting is under auspices of Internal Revenue Lodge, No. 47, American Federation of Government Employes.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF (F), (P) or (C) follows your name in this column call in person on the Federal Diary editor today between 4:30 and 6 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: (F) Loew's Fox (stage, Casino de Paree Revue and other acts; screen, Helen Hayes and Robert Montgomery in "Vanessa"); or to (P) Loew's Palace (Claudette Colbert in "The Gilded Lily"); or to (C) Loew's Columbia (stage, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson in person; screen, "Baboona").

Tacomis Affair Thursday.

The Tacomis Club, social organization of Tariff Commission, announces plans for the annual dinner-dance are under way. Mrs. Bertha M. Robertson is chairman of the committee on arrangements and is being assisted by Miss Mary J. Richey, Miss Adele R. Thode, Miss Bonnie L. Hockensmith, Miss Mary Carey (C), and Miss Anna K. Baum (C); W. G. McLennan, W. H. Corey, H. R. Stephan, R. W. Pinto and C. W. Housley.

The event is scheduled for Thursday night at the Shoreham Hotel. During the dinner an entertainment program will be given, with George Gaul's Orchestra playing.

In welding operations the heat tends to destroy the temper of metals. To obviate this destructive tendency, Elmer C. Goebert (F), War, has invented a welding strip that is expected to prove of immense value to the American military and industrial structure.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

AGAIN the Radio Institute of Audible Arts breaks through with a selective analysis of radio programs. Following are examples of programs. If your favorites aren't among them it's because your tastes aren't in accordance with the institute.

Samples of musical programs recommended: New York Philharmonic programs (presumably both the Sunday and children's concerts), Rhythm Symphony with De Wolfe Hopper as narrator; Andre Kostelanetz series on three week days; the Metropolitan Opera series, Sigmund Romberg's program and Nat Shilkret's program with Gladys Swarthout.

No mention is made of John Charles Thomas, Grace Moore, Lawrence Tibbett or Walter Damrosch's musical educational program, of the Curtis Institute of Music programs, of the various weekly symphonic programs by the Minneapolis, New York Civic and other orchestras or the N. B. C. Music Guild and Alice in Orchestralia spots.

Educational programs listed: American School of the Air, An American Fireside with famous guest speakers, You and Your Government series and the Economics in a Changing Social Order series.

Comedy: Jack Benny, Will Rogers (now off a regular air-spot), "Easy Aces," Burns and Allen and Beatrice Lillie. Sad for devotees of, Fred Allen, Eddie Cantor, Joe Penner, Ben Bernie and other comics who don't get an institute break. Wonder if Stoopnagle and Budd will be considered?

These programs were awarded meritorious standing by the institute, though the release doesn't state the standards of merit used in the judging.

Amelia Earhart Putman makes her debut as an actress today—with Red Davis on WMAL, 7:30 p. m. She will take the part, appropriately, of herself, and the story will explain what happens when a famous aviatrix enters the lives of the Davis family.
